EVANS, ENGLISH PASS LIE IN QUIZ

Today

A Catastrophic Day. Who Got the Big Money? How to Hold a Baby. 100,000,000 Lbs. of Cotton.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

TODAY'S NEWS is largely catastrophic. Fire and earthquake have destroyed Managua, capital of Nicaragua, and yesterday afternoon it was believed that more than 500 lives had been lost.

THE DEATH of Knute Rockne, marvelously successful coach of Notre Dame University, will shock and grieve millions. Rockne was killed with seven others in the crash of a westbound airplane.

KNUTE ROCKNE, possessing will power that enabled him to develop unlimited energy, courage and determination in young men, was the idol of millions, the despair of competitors.

He had trained his football players to realize the invincible power of "shock" attack with force back of it.

Now in such a shock, his life is destroyed.

SOMEONE IN New York is worrying about the possibility of a legislative investigation revealing the destination ultimately reached by graft from speakeasies.

There are in New York tens of thousands of them, their existence and location well known. Each one buys protection from somebody, and the total must run into millions a year.

However, bootlegging graft is so widely distributed that it may be deemed unwise to reveal too much about it.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, Jr., probably without knowing it, has diminished temporarily the income that grafters get from speakeasies.

Having bought several blocks in the heart of New York, he is clearing down old abandoned residences, evicting speakeasies, as the farmer evicts rats when he tears down an old barn.

Many blocks in the heart of New York offer a refuge to bootlegging.

Thirsty customers go through the basement doors under old-fashioned stone steps.

On rainy days little boys with umbrellas stand waiting to escort customers from their automobiles to the entrance, collecting tips.

MOTHERS OF some foolish American girls will learn with interest that British young women are traveling the same road as their American sisters.

London Punch shows a British flapper telling a friend she fears she will be asked to hold a baby. She doesn't know how to hold it. The friend replies:

"Don't be an ass; it is just the same grip as for a cocktail shaker."

That makes it perfectly clear. Hold your right hand up, the left lower, as though you were about to shake a cocktail, and you will see that is is the right position for holding a baby, one hand under its shoulders, one under its little legs.

WILLIAM WRIGLEY, an able businessman, in a dozen different directions, will buy up 100,000,000 pounds of cotton in the next eight months, if the price does not rise above 12 cents a pound.

At that price Mr. Wrigley will accept cotton in payment for all of his shipments to the South.

Mr. Wrigley says cotton is a good investment at 12 cents and is willing to lock up $12,000,000 worth of his company's resources in it and hold it indefinitely. Cotton ke[ep]

TWO PORTRAITS of Titian painted by himself have been found. One in the house of the Earl of Ashburnham, the other in that of the Earl of Darnley. They have hung in the houses of these unsuspecting earls for years, covered with thick, dirty [pa]int. Cleaned by experts, there is no doubt of their authenticity.

TITIAN'S CAREER encourages those that don't like to admit old age at 50.

He was 90 years of age when the plague killed him, and painting admirably except that age had dimmed the brightness of his colors.

GREAT PAINTERS live long because powerful brains and imaginations prolong life.

Michael Angelo was doing magnificent work when about 90. Odd, puzzling, to earnest pro[hi]bitionists, is his letter to a friend saying that he would have been unable to continue hard work had he not drunk several bottles a day of the excellent red wine that the nephew sent him.

Value, there are tannin, iron and vitamins in red wine, but how did he overcome the alcohol?

And how much longer might he have painted had he known enough to live on ice water, buckwheat cakes and apple pie?

IF YOU HAVE a big income, less a million dollars a year, elsewhere in the "higher taxes," here is balm for your aching heart.

President Hoover announced in Washington yesterday that there would be no increase in taxes in spite of the government's big deficit. Economy will be practiced. It is probably safe to predict no serious tax increase until after 1932. Raising taxes might be even more foolish than swapping horses while crossing a stream.

TAKE CARE of a business and it will take care of you. The story of the young Straus brothers, Jesse, Percy and Herbert, in the annual report, show that

QUIZ TOLD OF ROCKNE CRASH

Plane in Distress Before Wreck, Witness Testifies; Coach's Body on Way Home

COTTONWOOD FALLS, Kan., April 1.—(A.P.)—A coroner's jury was told today that the Transcontinental and Western Air Transport plane apparently was in distress for some minutes with its motors backfiring before it hurtled from the clouds yesterday to carry Knute Rockne and seven others to death in a pasture near Bazaar, Kan.

Robert Z. Blackburn, stockman, who witnessed the tragic crash, testified that he had drawn the conclusion that something was amiss from the sound of the craft's engines. He said:

"I heard the plane above the clouds. Then I ceased to hear it. After a lapse of five minutes, perhaps, I heard it again.

PLANE DISAPPEARS

"It seemed to linger in my hearing some time. Then I heard the engines backfire for some time. I was of the opinion then something was wrong.

"The sound attracted the attention of my cattle. Then I saw the plane coming out of the clouds at an angle of 45 degrees. I watched it until it went out of sight behind a hill. I heard a crash."

Blackburn's testimony opened the inquest into the tragedy. Besides Blackburn, two other witnesses, Edward Baker, son of Steward H. Baker, upon whose ranch the plane fell, and Clarence H. McCracken, ranch man, who saw the liner hurtle from the sky, were summoned by Coroner Dr. Jacob Hinden.

TO HEAR OFFICIALS

Dr. Hinden said other witnesses would be called, among them probably officials of Transcontinental and Western Air Express, Inc., owners of the ill-fated plane, and a Department of Commerce aviation inspector.

The inspector, who has viewed the wreckage, is Leonard Jurdon, Kansas City. H. G. Edgerton, Wichita, district agent of the airplane company, probably will be called, Dr. Hinden said, to tell of the last radio message from the craft, received at 10:45 a. m., asking about weather conditions.

Harris Hanshue, president of Transcontinental and Western Air Express, and Anthony Fokker, designer of the craft which carried its crew and passengers to swift death, were expected to arrive here today.

They were reported en route to Wichita by airplane from Los Angeles. They planned to drive the 90 miles from Wichita to Cottonwood Falls.

Fokker was quoted in dispatches from the coast as saying:

"It is out of the question to consider that the airplane itself was defective. I recall that I inspected it personally in Amarillo, Tex., two days ago and found it in perfect condition."

DEBRIS CARRIED AWAY

Ranchers in the vicinity of the crash said little of the plane remained for Fokker to examine, the larger part of the debris hav-

Ignored Civil Service Body, Named Political Aides as Works Inspectors, Charge

During a stormy Council hearing in which the lie was passed between Henry Oliver Evans and Councilman W. P. English, Evans, prosecutor of charges against the City Department of Public Works, charged Mayor Charles A. Kline with saying:

"To hell with the Civil Service Commission."

Evans was renewing his effort to bring the Mayor before Council for questioning as to politically appointments.

Evans said he would produce a witness who will testify that Mayor Kline defied the Civil Service Commission, saying:

"I'll produce a witness who will say that Director Edward G. Lang said that the Civil Service Commission 'didn't amount to that'—that he had to have the Mayor's word. I'll produce a witness who will testify that the Mayor said: 'To hell with the Civil Service Commission.'"

The former controller was charged by Councilman W. P. English with trying to "ruin" Council on the garbage and rubbish situation two years ago.

LIE PASSED

Evans, jumping to his feet, declared:

"That charge is malicious contemptible, willful, unwarranted and a dirty lie. No one believes what is said in a political campaign. I want to say again that I am not motivated by politics."

Interrupting Evans, English declared:

"Just like the lies you told over the radio in your political campaign."

Continuing, Evans said:

"We have the people with us in this investigation, and I think it is right to turn this question of engineering technicalities over to a committee of engineers. I'll prove that there is corruption. Before I get through, we will know who is corrupt, and we'll put a stop to it."

Salary-Raise Bill Signed By Pinchot

By ED PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, April 1.—Gov. Pinchot today signed Senator James J. Coyne's bill to permit the pay of the members of Mayor Kline's cabinet to be increased from a maximum of $8,000 to $12,000 a year.

It is the first salary-raiser the governor has approved at this session. Because of his opposition to bills of that character it had been expected he would not approve the Coyne bill. It had been believed that to avoid embarrassing Coyne by a veto he would ask the recall of the measure.

In approving it he remarked that the pay boost is not mandatory and that it promotes home rule.

STATEMENT ISSUED

His statement said:

"I approve this bill because it is consistent with the home rule principle in which I thoroughly believe. My approval of it does not indicate any convic-

SNOW AND RAIN TO CONTINUE

Almost an inch of snowfall was reported today from the mountainous district of the state, and in Pittsburgh and vicinity rain and snowfall was close to an inch, according to Weatherman W. S. Brotzman. Inclement weather will continue during the day and night, but should cease early tomorrow, he said.

State Highway Department bulletins said that the highways were devoid of slippery conditions except in the highest altitudes in Somerset County. Fifty trucks, manned by 150 workmen, were patroling the roads in the affected territory, the bulletin said.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—(INS.)—The Atlantic Coast from Miami to New York was being racked by storms, according to reports received by the Weather Bureau today.

Rum Case Jury Opens Season For Marathons

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Boston jury has started marathon contests for 1931. It has been deadlocked 159 hours.

It's a liquor case. The man who drank it is going to be deadlocked forever.

The foreman is an automobile mechanic and is accustomed to 159 hours of deliberation.

We know how these long deliberations wind up. The jury pleads guilty, the prisoner discharges the judge and the lawyers throw themselves on the mercy of the news reel photographers.

All records for justice have been broken. The jury is now on its twenty-first meal, the prisoner has grown a full beard no one can recognize him and the last surviving witness has

UNION ACCUSES CAB COMPANY

Charges of taxicab drivers that the Parmelee Transportation Company is showing preference to non-union men and discharging union employes without cause, will be aired at meetings late today at which a representative of Daniel E. Tobin, president of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers, is expected to attend.

Officials said that within the last two weeks complaints have been made that the company was discriminating against union men. Numerous union drivers, among them Michael J. Burns, president of the cab drivers' local here, have been discharged without sufficient reason, it was claimed.

It was explained that the prospect of another strike is not being considered, but that union officials hope to hold the company to the terms of the agreement which brought last year's strike to an end.

The union here now has 966 members, it was said.

In a statement today President Moncada predicted the city soon would be rebuilt. He said:

Men Walk From Mine As Rescuers Arrive

The Bureau of Mines today sent rescuers to Homestead when the Chotting Coal Company, West Run road, reported two inspectors entering the old working had not returned. Paul Schotting, 40, and William Demmel, 45, the men reported lost, walked from the mine as the rescuers arrived.

Accused Chauffeur Fired By Winship's Widow

SAN FRANCISCO, April 1.—(AP.)—The widow of Lieut. Comm. Emory Winship, U. S. N., retired, has dismissed Ray McGunigle, the family chauffeur, over whom a coroner's jury found Winship killed himself because of jealousy.

Edward I. Barry, attorney for the widow, Mrs. Dorothy Winship, said financial stringency was one of the reasons. He explained:

"Mrs. Winship is virtually without funds."

Barry said she would not try to attend her husband's funeral next Saturday in Macon, Ga., adding:

"Mrs. Winship is financially at sea. Not only has she been denied traveling expenses to Georgia, but her husband's attorneys have persisted in refusing to let her see the will or have any foreknowledge of what good or bad fortune is in store for her and her infant son."

The will, copies of which have been denied both the widow and Helen Elizabeth Thompson, screen actress, who asserts Winship set up a trust fund for her, is to be filed for probate in Macon Saturday.

Rockne Death 'National Loss,' Hoover Says

WASHINGTON, April 1.—(INS.)—Expressing the sentiment of the nation, President Hoover today telegraphed Mrs. Knute Rockne a message of condolence over the death of her famous husband. The President wired:

"I know that every American grieves with you, Mr. Rockne so contributed to a cleanness and high purpose and sportsmanship in athletics that his passing is a national loss."

Secretary of War Hurley and Gen. Douglass MacArthur, chief of staff, sent messages of condolence to the Rev. C. L. O'Donnell, president of Notre Dame University on the death of Rockne.

Eighteen pouches of mail were found intact in the twisted wreckage and forwarded by train to Wichita.

Authorities placed a guard about the remaining wreckage when a rumor spread that H. J. Christen, one of the victims of the accident, was carrying nearly half a million dollars in securities on his person.

Authorities said no securities were found on Christen's body.

Additional details of the tragedy continued to unfold today. These details indicated that the two pilots and six passengers met instant death. There was no fire, indicating the Transcontinental and Western Air pilot, Robert Frye, had switched off the engines in the last moments of despair. The plane, which had left Kansas City little more than an hour before, was shattered against the ground, its motors partly buried.

Y ON WAY HOME

NSAS CITY, April 1.—(AP.) he body of Knute Rockne, tball wizard of Notre Dame, ed in an airplane crash near naar, Kan., yesterday, was ced aboard a Santa Fe train ay to be shipped home to South nd, Ind., via Chicago.

Accompanying the body were Rockne's two sons, William, 14, and Knute, Jr., 11; Dr. D. M. Nigro, a personal friend of the Rockne family, several members of the famous undefeated Notre Dame football team and representatives of the university faculty.

Dr. Nigro requested of Notre Dame men that the casket never be opened. He said:

"We should remember Rockne as he was."

MISSED FATHER

William and Knute, Jr., attending school here, missed saying goodbye to their famous dad by 20 minutes yesterday. They were returning to Kansas City after spending a vacation with their mother and hoped to reach the station before Knute left for the airport. Their train was late, however, and after waiting until the last possible moment, Rockne started for the airport.

They learned of their father's death through Dr. Nigro. For a few minutes he comforted them as they sobbed at the news. Then Dr. Nigro said:

"Take it like sports—the sons of a great man."

The boys dried their tears, then bore the tragedy like veterans of their father's football training. Knute, Jr., said:

"I'm going to be a coach like my father."

That Rockne feared death no more in an airplane than on the ground was revealed by L. W. (Chip) Robert, Georgia Tech trustee, and a friend of long standing. He told of a flight with the famous football coach when Rockne remarked:

"I think each of us has a time to go and when that time comes, no matter where we are, death strikes. So I figure it might as well be in a plane as anywhere else."

WHEELING, W. Va., April 1.—(AP.)—The serious illness of a daughter in Amarillo, Tex., prompted Charles A. Robrecht, 65, Wheeling, W. Va., to board the plane in which he and seven others were killed near Bazaar, Kan.

Robrecht, president of the C. A. Robrecht Produce Company, of Wheeling, has a son, C. A. Robrecht, Jr., who is a graduate of Notre Dame University, and a personal friend of Knute Rockne, Notre Dame football coach, who was among those killed in the crash.

OPPOSE $1 CUT IN AUTO FEES

The Pittsburgh Motor Club legislative committee recommends not more than a 25 per cent reduction in the fee for drivers' licenses in Pennsylvania. B. V. Imbrie, club director and member of the committee, said last night. A bill introduced in the Senate by Senator J. S. Boyd and in the House by Representative Sowers, would cut operators' fees from $2 to $1.

The 25 per cent reduction will take $1,000,000 from the state highway fund annually, and if the method of gasoline tax collection is changed so it will be paid at the source, the deficit can be made up easily, Imbrie said.

Urging gas tax collection at the source, Imbrie cited that while Pennsylvania spends hundreds of thousands of dollars in unsuccessful efforts to collect all the tax and eliminate grafting and unlicensed retail station operation, California collects a similar amount at an annual cost of $8,566.

Rockne's Mother, 72, Bears Grief Bravely

CHICAGO, April 1.—(Universal.)—While the country mourned today the passing of Knute Rockne, its greatest coach as well as one of its most colorful figures, a little, trembling woman of 72, bore the grief today that only a mother can know.

She is Mrs. Martha Rockne, who watched with quiet satisfaction the rise of her son to the acknowledged pinnacle as first football leader of the land.

She fought back the tears as she said:

"Proud of him for all that he has done? No, not exactly proud. I knew that he was a good man and that is all that any mother wants to know of her son."

national figure as coach of Notre Dame's elevens.

Messages of condolence arriving here and at the home of the gridiron mentor's mother in Chicago, expressed the shock his death occasioned throughout the country.

Here where Rockne's life has centered at Notre Dame University since he first appeared as a football candidate in 1911 business was suspended.

The university itself was in mourning; its students and faculty were making plans for "Rock's" homecoming. It was expected the funeral would be held one week from today, but university officials deferred announcement until the arrival of his widow from the South.

TO MEET TRAIN

Funeral services will undoubtedly be held in the Sacred Heart Church here where Rockne was baptized in the Catholic faith in October, 1925. He will probably be buried here.

The Monogram Club, composed of students who earned recognition in service to the university in all lines of sports, will meet the funeral train here Thursday. Mrs. Rockne will arrive shortly afterward. Rockne's body will be taken to the campus to lie in state prior to the funeral.

This morning the great bell in Sacred Heart Church tolled as students and faculty members knelt at a mass for Rockne. Father Charles L. O'Donnell, president of the university, celebrated the mass and gave communion to the 2,000 Cathlic students at the institution.

Ballistic Laboratory Opened by McGregor

Allegheny County's first scientific crime test and ballistic laboratory was opened today by Coroner W. J. McGregor. The laboratory is housed in the old refrigeration room behind the chapel of the morgue.

ROCKNE'S WIFE SPEEDS NORTH

CORAL GABLES, Fla., April 1.—(AP.)—Mrs. Knute Rockne sped northward today from her winter residence here to South Bend, Ind., for the funeral of her husband, killed in an airplane accident in Kansas.

She left here by train last night accompanied by Thomas O'Neil, of Akron, O., friend of the family; her daughter, Mary Jane, 10; her son, Jackie, 5, and a maid. She expected to reach Chicago at 2:35 tomorrow afternoon on her way to South Bend.

Mrs. Rockne received the news of her husband's death bravely and helped members of her household with their packing for the trip. She had planned to leave here today by automobile for South Bend, where she was to meet her husband next Monday.

Coolidge Praises Plan To Issue Business Code

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., April 1.

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

The foundation of the work of the Federal Trade Commission is to prevent unfair trade practices. Stated in another way, it is to promote common honesty.

With all the inquisitorial powers vested in the commission, with its large staff of investigators constantly in the field, it is greatly to the credit of the business men of the United States that so few derelictions are discovered. No doubt the work of the commission is needed. Its existence is a deterrent. Its warning prevents the development of dangerous policies and usually its suggestions are welcomed.

Mr. Coolidge

For these reasons the report that the commission soon will issue a code of business ethics is important. Men like to know in advance what they are expected to do and they need the assurance that the whole trade is to live by the same high standards. Business and government are closely related. Both need constant checking to be kept free from questionable practices. The business of the nation will be encouraged and guided by some positively constructive suggestions.

VIKING GOING ON NAUTILUS POLE TRIP

Descendant of Ancient Sea Rovers Certain He Will Return; Rules Submerging

The accompanying Wilkins polar expedition feature deals with Elwood Hanson, diving officer, who takes command when the Nautilus submerges.

By HERMAN GIESKE

NEW YORK, March 31.—Did anyone ever hear of a great sea-faring expedition without its Viking?

The Nautilus—tiny submarine that soon will brave the Arctic deeps bound for the great unknown—has one aboard, a real one, in whose veins flows unmistakably the adventurous blood of the roving sea-lords of the tenth century.

FORMER NAVY MAN

He is Elwood Hanson, 34, late of the United States Navy, and he looks the part. He was orphaned at the age of 2, and his ancestry has been traced to the days of Richard the Lion-Hearted of England, who sought to wrest Jerusalem from the Moslems. Hanson's American kin settled on Lord Baltimore's lands in the 1600's and, as Ripley himself can vouch for, is a lineal descendant of that John H. Hanson who, for three days, was the first president of the United States.

No one can say, with certitude, that the Nautilus may not bob up, a floating coffin, a half century hence. But that's not bothering Hanson. Says he:

"It's not so much how long you live, but the way you live, that counts."

HOLDS FATE OF SUB

Hanson's most important work for the expedition will come when the Nautilus submerges. He must know 600 or more valves and gadgets in the submarine and what to do when something goes wrong. As he explained:

"A novice taking his first dive on a submarine, probably is the coolest person aboard and gets little thrill. He doesn't actually know what it's all about, doesn't realize the peril that can come from a little piece of mechanism gone wrong. A tiny mechanical defect may bring disaster to a submarine."

Why Hanson is aboard the Nautilus he states very simply:

"I wanted to go—that's all."

Then he usually pauses an instant and adds:

"And I'll come back alive, too."

When the Nautilus reaches the Arctic ice pack and the command, "Submerge!" is given, Diving Officer Hanson is in charge. It's his job to get the boat down and back up again.

For that kind of work what better type of man could be selected than a Viking?

FAILURE FACES LAW SURVEY

WASHINGTON, April 1.—(AP.)—Convening for he first time in a month, President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission today confronted the admitted impossibility of completing its crime survey during its allotted life.

One finished report lay before the members, the first since the survey of prohibition, while nine more remained to be completed before July 1. On that date the remainder of the commission's $250,000 appropriation will expire and its offices must be abandoned and its clerical force dismissed.

Unless plans are altered, the members will give early consideration to the criminal statistics study directed by Dean Roscoe Pound, of Harvard.

SIFT ATTACK ON JAILED CRIPPLE

Safety Director James M. Clark today demanded that Inspector Charles Faulkner investigate the charges of Miss Mary Kupka, 21, of 3017 Cohutta street, that Patrolman Daniel Shope, of Woods Run Station, struck her crippled brother, George, 18, on the head with a mace.

In Morals Court, when Kupka was arraigned yesterday on a charge of shooting dice, Miss Kupka charged the officer struck her brother on the head, dragged him by a thong attached to his neck, and handled her roughly when she attempted to interfere. Magistrate Jones fined both of the Kupkas $1. Miss Kupka was arraigned on a disorderly conduct charge.

BURKE HINTS GUILTY PLEA

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., April 1.—(INS.)—Fred "Killer" Burke, war veteran of the 339th Infantry Machine Gun Battalion and later gangland's most feared machine-gun executioner, may plead guilty to the first degree murder charges against him, it was indicated today.

Burke, reputed slayer of 21 men and called the "most dangerous gangster in America," is charged with the slaying of Patrolman Charles Skelly here.

Charles W. Gore, the gunman's attorney, indicated that there would be no trial. Burke gave similar hints to his guards. Gore said:

"I can't say as yet whether we will go to trial. It is possible that there will be no trial and that Burke will plead guilty."

Gore declared he had been retained by Mrs. Bonnie Porter Burke, daughter of a Missouri farmer and the wife whom Burke married while being sought by the police of the nation.

PROSECUTOR AND HYMIE CLASH

Martin Defiantly Repli 'None of Your Business When Quizzed About Mar

CLEVELAND, O., April 1.—"Pittsburgh Hymie" Martin entered today the hardest and most-heated battle of his trial here on a charge of murdering former Councilman William E. Potter—a lashing cross-examination by Prosecutor Ray T. Miller. It was a dramatic battle of wits between the prosecutor and the defendant, with conviction or acquittal at stake.

Hymie opened the session with a denial that he owned or ever had in his possession the gun the state contends was used in the killing.

HYMIE DEFIANT

Miller shot out questions like a rapid-fire machine gun. Martin's answers were sharp and defiant. The prosecutor's attack was first directed at Martin's claim he was in Pittsburgh on January 27—the day Fred C. Laub, custodian of the apartment where Potter was killed, has testified Martin rented the death suite. Miller inferred that January 28 was the day the apartment was rented instead of the 27th, then demanded:

"Where are those alibi witnesses for the 28th?"

Martin answered:

"They are around."

The prosecutor ordered:

"Name them!"

Hymie retorted:

"I don't know. The state has been interefering with our witnesses."

The defendant named Alfie Goldstrom, of Pittsburgh—who was arrested there as a suspicious person and held on bond, then found in an apartment with "Akron Mary" Outland Woodfield—as a witness with whom the state allegedly interfered. Miller continued:

"You say you were in Pittsburgh January 28, 29, 30 and 31?"

NONE OF YOUR BUSINESS

Martin answered affirmatively. The defendant said, however, he was also in Cleveland briefly on January 28 or 29.

A moment later Miller caught Martin in a tangle. He said:

"You told me you never saw Harry Collins in the Winton Hotel?"

"I said not in any room."

Miller shouted:

"Don't spar with me! Did you see him in a room—in 314?"

Martin answered "yes."

"And isn't Collins the man who was with you on the afternoon of February 3, when you met Bill Potter?"

Hymie retorted:

"I never met him."

His reply referred to Potter. Failing to trap Martin into admitting he had met Potter, the prosecutor continued:

"Isn't it true that you and Mary Outland lived at your sister's home as man and wife?"

Hymie snapped:

"That is none of your business."

While today's session was in progress Detective Inspector Cornelius Cody announced that a police guard was established at Prosecutor Miller's home after Miller received a threatening letter. The contents of the letter were not disclosed.

First With the Latest

The Sun-Telegraph, in informing its readers yesterday of the death of Knute Rockne and seven others in an airplane disaster, again maintained its reputation of being "first with the latest." Readers of the Sun-Telegraph had the news nearly an hour before the readers of any other Pittsburgh newspaper.

In this case, as in others, the facilities of the Sun-Telegraph to gather and present the news of an event of major importance again were proved superior. "First with the latest."

CHILDREN HERE TELL OF QUAKE

The earthquake in Nicaragua, which claimed 1,000 lives, recalls similar experiences to Billie Maxine Little, 15, and her brother, John, 12, children of Dr. and Mrs. Richard N. Little, of 6323 Stanton avenue. The family resided in Managua in 1926.

Billie, a freshman in Peabody High School, said she and her brother were playing in their garage in Managua when they felt the building shake and a pile of boxes in a corner tumbled down around them.

Dr. Little, of the Navy Medical Corps, attached to Marine headquarters in Pittsburgh, explained that they had frequent slight earthquakes during the dry season in Nicaragua. Dr. Little served with the Marine Corps in Managua and Granada.

Lawyer, New York Prober in '80's, Dies

NEW YORK, April 1.—(AP.)—De Lancey Nicoll, 76, who rose to fame in the '80's when New York, like today, seethed with investigations of officialdom, is dead.

Pinnacles in his career were his convictions of Ferdinand Ward, former brokerage partner of Gen. Grant, and of "boodle aldermen" while on the staff of the district attorney. He started a veritable parade of grafting aldermen to prison.

Marines Control Flames Sweeping Quake Ruins; Thousands Dead; Hurt

various personal inspections of the ruined city since yesterday afternoon.

American Minister Matthew Hanna and Mrs. Hanna flew here from Salvador today.

GERMAN KILLED

When the earthquake occurred yesterday the new Mexican consul general, Dr. Manuel Payno, was on his way to the capital aboard a train. He left the train with his family at Leon when news of the earthquake reacheed him.

None of the English and French residents of the foreign colony were killed, but Frederick Morris, a resident of the German section, died shortly after both his legs were crushed by falling debris.

An amphibian plane from the United States aircraft carrier Lexington was expected today with relief.

With detachments of United States Marines and Nicaraguan National Guard maintaining martial law, all available men were mobilized to fight the flames and take dead and injured from the ruins.

The American Legation was in flames and all archives were lost. Earth tremors were reported continuing.

It was impossible to place an accurate estimate on the number of dead, but 1,000 persons are believed to have been killed and 2,000 injured in the shocks, 11 of which occurred in two minutes before noon yesterday.

AMERICANS INJURED

Among the known American casualties were:

Lieut. Com. Hugo F. A. Baske, doctor in the Nicaraguan National Guard.

Mrs. Joseph D. Murray, of Concord, Mass., wife of a major in the United States Marine Corps.

James F. Dickey, of Vallejo, Cal., chief quarter-master clerk, U. S. M. C.

Italian Consul Napoleon Re, was among those killed.

No mortalities among American civilians have been reported yet.

Most of the panic-stricken populace were camped in parks and on the shores of Lake Managua.

There is not a habitable residence left in the once-beautiful Central American city, the second in size in the republic.

President Moncado abandoned the National Palace for a tent.

There is no water available for drinking purposes or fighting the fires, the tremors having broken water mains and flooded streets, while a landslide covered the pumping station on the edge of Lake Aososca. The Central American Power Company station was not damaged, and will furnish limited street lighting tonight.

The greatest loss of life occurred in the National Penitentiary, where at least 150 persons were killed when walls and ceilings of the buildings collapsed. As many more were injured.

Many Nicaraguans were killed in the public market place, and two Nicaraguan National Guardsmen were burned to death while attempting a rescue.

Although most of Nicaragua felt the quakes, which occurred with deadly suddenness just after 10 o'clock, only Managua suffered any real damage.

A complete check of casualties will not be possible until the blaze has been quelled and rescue squads have a chance to dig through the debris of the city, if then. Many bodies are buried beneath the crushed adobe walls, and many injured are imprisoned in the debris, probably burned to death.

The Marines, in taking charge of the situation, issued orders that individuals caught looting would be shot on the spot, but no looting or depredation has been discovered. Col. F. L. Bradman is acting in charge of Marines, and Gen. Calvin Bruce Matthews is directing the National Guard.

Relief work from without the city was speeded during the night. The U. S. S. Rochester left Panama at 7 p. m. for Corinto, and the Salinas was ordered to come with a cargo of food and supplies. Twenty-four army planes from Panama and five planes of the Pan-American Airways, which suspended regular operations to aid in the relief, were assigned to fly to Managua.

BANK RAZED FOR SAFETY

In an effort to prevent spread of the blaze, started by short circuits in the wiring of fallen buildings, army officers from the Nicaraguan canal survey at Granada took over the task of demolition of structures in the path of the flames, one such ordered destroyed being the Anglo-South American Bank Building.

There was $500,000 in coin and currency in the bank vaults, but it was believed impossible to reach it. The National Bank Building was damaged, but not severely.

The Nicaraguan Brewery is virtually intact and is furnishing water and other beverage to victims and Marines.

MANAGUA QUAKE RECORDED HERE

Although several thousand miles to the south, the earthquake which yesterday devastated Managua, Nicaragua, with an estimated death list of 1,000 persons, was recorded in Pittsburgh.

Prof. J. Hammond Smith, of the civil engineering department of the University of Pittsburgh, in charge of the seismograph recently installed in the Cathedral of Learning, said the tremors were registered here for 43 minutes. They began at 10:43 a. m., the maximum of the disturbance being recorded at 10:49.

At no time was the quake record spectacular, Prof. Smith said, but it was of such magnitude that when reports from the stricken zone were received here they did not surprise him.

This was the first serious disturbance recorded on the new seismograph.

Torch Starts Fire, Little Damage Done

Six North Side fire companies turned out in answer to an alarm at Clark's Teaberry Gum plant at Martindale and Corry streets today, but they had little to do. A gas torch which a workman was operating in the basement caught fire when a leak occurred in an attached hose. There was no damage.

EX-PITTSBURGH COUPLE SAFE

Lieut. Col. Franklin B. Garrett and wife, Mrs. Lydia Garrett, former Pittsburghers, stationed at the marine base at Managua, Nicaragua, escaped in the earthquake which yesterday took hundreds of lives, it was learned by relatives today.

Mr. and Mrs. William P. Sims, of 1534 Park boulevard, Dormont, brother-in-law and sister-in-law of the Garretts, received a radio message at 3:10 a. m. The message read:

"Both safe. Garrett."

The Garretts lived in the Oakland district up until a year and a half ago, when Col. Garrett was transferred to the capital of Nicaragua.

Mrs. Garrett and Mrs. Sims are sisters.

Public Service Commissioner S. Ray Shelby today was petitioned by counsel for the Allied Boards of Trade for an adjournment in the rate case against the Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company, and for assistance in obtaining facts which led the company to set its rate at 25 cents.

The commissioner held that the request was legal, and suggested that the company submit the facts desired without the necessity of assigning a staff of commission engineers and accountants.

Attorney P. A. Pfleger, representing the company, said he could promise nothing until he had discussed the question with company officials. Pfleger said he had no notice that the petition would be filed.

EVANS, ENGLISH PASS LIE IN PROBE

Mayor Kline Accused of Flaunting Civil Service, Naming Political Aides

rated by Evans as political propaganda and he said that the League of Women voters of Allegheny County, too, were actuated by political motives.

These charges featured the sixth day of the open hearing upon charges of inefficiency in the Department of Public Works. The only definite action of the day was the authorization of an investigation by a board of engineers, selected from the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania, of the system of preparing and letting contracts for city improvements by the department.

Director Lang was called to the stand and was questioned further regarding political appointments in the department by Mayor Kline, to which the witness replied that the naming of technical men are not political appointments, but that most of the city inspectors are.

CALLS FOR MAYOR

Evans then repeated his demand for the presence of the Mayor. Mayor Kline, however, will not attend today's hearing. He is confined to his bed at a hotel in Cambridge Springs, a victim of laryngitis, according to Mrs. Kline.

Charles M. Reppert, chief engineer of the works department, resumed the witness stand this afternoon and after reading a letter he had written to Mr. Evans regarding the system of intimate checking he had installed in the department, referred to charges that had been made against the department by the late George H. Flinn.

his letter had been refused admission to the record by Chairn Little earlier in the day, but reference had been made to Reppert, he ruled that it be introduced. Attorney read the letter. The letter corruption in the Department Public Works.

S CROOKEDNESS

g a conversation upon of the letter, Evans said linn told him the department was crooked.

asked: 'Do you mean Mr. ppert, Mr. Lang or Mr. Reed?' which Flinn replied, 'No, I an the inspectors and younger gineers.'

"He told me about the Lincoln avenue and the Boulevard of the Allies and sewer jobs. I said, 'George, will you go through with these charges?' and he replied that he would."

Councilman W. Y. English precipitated the argument in which the lie was passed when he concluded the reading of a letter he had written in reply to an editorial attack upon him appearing in this morning's issue of the Post-Gazette. He charged that the entire investigation was an attemp. to rip out a mayor whom they could not defeat at the polls."

Attorney Evans, quoting from Proverbs xxvi:11, "Answer not a fool according to his folly, lest he be wise in his own conceit," brought English to his feet again with the declaration that the controller is a political en- and that he was causing investigation for purely polit- purposes.

'sh asserted that Evans had with six members of on the garbage estion came up for the audit. members of Council at English said, were Mayor, and three for started to name the ittle, Robert Garland s Anderson were on shouting "lie." They at they were present and n apologized. He was apauded as he sat down.

BEATTY BRINGS CALM

The argument was ended by Attorney Beatty, who said he did not think it was fair to Director Lang. He added:

"It is the duty of Council to sit here as jurors. A hearing means you are to listen."

The department's accuser sought to introduce a letter from George H. Flinn charging corruption in the department, but it was ruled outside the evidence by Chairman Little. Evans then called William Wright, an assistant superintendent on a state highway improvement. Wright's qualifications as a witness were questioned by Attorney Beatty as the morning session recessed.

William A. Fox, an engineer of the works department, called to the stand when the hearing opened, was questined closely by Attorney Beatty on the Lincoln avenue improvement. Fox said that the estimate of 200 cubic yards of sub-base used there had been made by Tom Reed and himself.

This afternoon Council decided to receive the report of the Building Owners' and Managers' Association on the management of the City-County Building and the wharf parking situation.

Building owners claim that they have schedules for the adjustment of payrolls and expenses which will make it possible for the city to save $150,000 a year in running the City-County Building and $100,000 a year in the operation of the market houses.

No careful check has been kept on the revenues of the wharf parking stations, building owners declare. The city has been realizing $8,000 to $11,000 a year on the wharf properties whereas they should be getting as high as $40,000 a year net, it is claimed.

WHARF LEASES

The building owners have suggested leasing the wharves to private interests and placing a 15-cent limit on the parking charge. The Real Estate Board will support the Building Owners on the City-County Building and market house proposals, but not on private leases on the wharves.

Col. W. R. Dunlap, director of the Department of Supplies, has announced the start on a complete reorganization of the methods of the department, which were the starting point for the audit now in progress and to other inquiries into the city's buying methods.

Haphazard methods will be eliminated, Col. Dunlap said last night, and the work of the department divided among certain individuals, who will held responsible for it. The new system is to be in partial operation today. It follows closely the recommendations of the bureau of governmental research.

SENATE ENDS UTILITY QUIZ

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 1.—(AP.)—The Senate committee today apparently had completed its two-day stand in the theater of public utility and Public Service Commission investigation and had left the stage clear for the House committee.

The examination of Albert M. Greenfield, Philadelphia realtor, which extended through the entire Senate committee session yesterday, terminated with the committee adjourning without indicating when or upon what lines its inquiry would be resumed.

The House committee, on the other hand, resumed its investigation this afternoon and will end its activity for the week with the Thursday sitting.

BOARD ON CANAL CONFIRMED

HARRISBURG, April 1.—(AP.)—The Senate today confirmed the appointment of the Lake Erie and Ohio River Canal Board comprising:

Alex W. Dann, chairman; John B. Eichenauer, Pittsburgh; W. Y. English, Pittsburgh; Charles C. McGovern, Pittsburgh; Frank Purnell, Youngstown, O., and W. B. Rodgers, Pittsburgh.

Springbrook Water Argument Delayed

PHILADELPHIA, April 1.—(AP.)—The Superior Court today postponed from April 20 to November 16 the argument in the appeal in the Scranton-Springbrook Water Company rate case.

The hearing in November will be held in Philadelphia. The postponed hearing was to have been held in Pittsburgh. The postponement was asked for on petition from Scranton, Wilkes-Barre and Pittston. The appeal is from the decision of the Public Service Commission in fixing water rates for Wyoming and Lackawanna counties.

COUNTY ORDERS FURNITURE ON LOW BIDS

Ten Lots for New Office Building Let; Protest By Losing Firm Overruled

Contracts for furniture, totaling $7,901.16, for the new county office building were awarded yesterday by the County Commissioners to the lowest bidders.

The items included desks, chairs, tables and bookcases and were divided into 10 lots, distributed to the various officials and departments.

Lots Nos. 1, 4, 5, 7, 8, 9 and 10 were awarded to the Pittsburgh Office and Equipment Company for $6,810.52; lot No. 2 to the Yawman & Erbe Co. for $568.65; lot No. 3 to the Business Furniture Company for $345.39, and lot No. 6 to the General Fireproofing Company for $176.60.

Carl Swanson, of the Yawman & Erbe Co., which was next to the low bidder on the first seven lots, sought to have the successful bidder ignored on a charge of not living up to the specifications.

Swanson pointed out that instructions to bidders providing for the rejection of all bids not based on the specifications or containing any erasures. He said his nearest competitor bid on 39 chairs of different design than that called for.

H. R. Wachter, of the Pittsburgh Office and Equipment Company, denied the allegation and said his firm bid on the same type of chairs as called for by the county. He said his bid saved the county $950 and that the firm's furniture was used in 36 Pittsburgh banks. The commissioners sustained Wachter.

In a number of items, the specifications called for a particular make of an article but the words "or equal" invariably followed, permitting all dealers to compete.

UTILITY VALUES DEFENDED

Separate valuations placed on the Duquesne Light Company for tax and rate purposes are fully in accordance with the letter and the spirit of the law, Frank R. Phillips, president of the Duquesne Light Company, declared yesterday, when questioned about testimony given at Harrisburg last week before the House committee investigating the Public Service Commission.

The $49,000,000 valuation for tax purposes is the appraisal placed by the state on the company's common and preferred stock for the state capital stock tax. The tax does not take bonds or surplus into consideration and is in no sense a valuation of the organizations' physical properties, Phillips explained.

The $149,000,000 valuation is presented in accordance with the rules of the Public Service Commission. It represents invested capital in the Duquesne Light Company.

Phillips declared that the actual value of the properties used in operations is greater than this figure, since the two principal power plants are worth about $100,000,000 each.

Equitable Gas Seeks Duff City Company

HARRISBURG, April 1.—(AP.)—The Philadelphia Company and the Equitable Gas Company, Pittsburgh, applied to the Public Service Commission for permission for the Philadelphia to acquire the Duff City Gas Company through the Equitable company. The Duff City Gas Company supplies natural gas in Ross, McCandless, Franklin, Marshall and Ohio townships, Allegheny County.

State Workers Must Buy Own Brief Cases

HARRISBURG, April 1.—(AP.)—Secretary of Property and Supplies James F. Malone today notified all state departments that under the policy of the present administration brief cases will not be purchased for any of the departments, boards or commissions.

SALARY-RAISE BILL SIGNED BY PINCHOT

tion that the salaries of Pittsburgh's department heads should be increased.

"This bill does not increase salaries. It merely allows to the City Council of Pittsburgh a greater latitude in determining what the salaries of heads of departments shall be within the limit of $12,000 per annum.

"If in 1913, when the act now in force was approved, $8,000 per annum was a proper maximum salary, it is obvious that the change in economic conditions clearly warrants a higher maximum at the present time.

"The Philadelphia City Charter Act permits the City Council to fix the salary of all city officers, including department heads, at any maximum it choose without limitation.

"The present bill is restricted to department heads and imposes a final limit. So far as it goes, it puts the matter of fixing salaries in the hands of City Council, where it properly belongs."

REVIVE MANAGER BILL

A move to revive the city manager bill for Pittsburgh, shelved by Allegheny County members last night, will be made next week. Sponsors of the bill say they have a fair chance securing enough votes to bring it out of committee over the objections of the Allegheny delegation's head.

The move to "postpone indefinitely" action on the Moore bill last night was headed by Dr. Joseph G. Steedle, James Wettach, James H. McClure, Joseph G. Lynch and others. For a time sponsors of the bill feared that the action of the Allegheny County delegation would kill the measure, but today there was hope that it might be reported out over the objections of the Pittsburgh contingent.

WETTACH "EXPLAINS"

Representative Wettach, with Senator James J. Coyne and other members of the delegation, left for Pittsburgh today. Wettach, who sponsored the move to abolish the bill, said:

"My constituents didn't want it."

Moore, chairman of the elections committee, commented as follows:

"I'll not be a party to the stifling of the bill. It was tabled, and can be brought up at another meeting. I'll entertain a motion to bring it to a vote when asked.

"The demands for the bill are widespread, and from real and substantial sources and organizations. They are demands we cannot afford to ignore.

"It is an optional bill, and I believe the people have a right to decide what kind of local government they should have."

The Steedle bill granting the Allegheny County district attorney an increase from $10,000 to $13,000 is on its way to the Senate, after passing the House last night.

HOUSE O. K.'S STEEDLE BILL

A debate over the Steedle bill to increase the district attorney's salary was precipitated by Carl Baldrige, of Edgewood, who said that while he hoped to see Andrew T. Park re-elected and would support him next fall, Park had received a raise less than two years ago when he was promoted from assistant to the district attorneyship. Baldrige objected to salary raises at this time.

POLICE BILL HELD UP

The Musmanno coal and iron police bill lingers in the Senate's Judiciary General Committee, passed up at yesterday's session, although its sponsor, M. A. Musmanno, is confident it will emerge next week.

Sporadic attacks on the Sunday milk delivery bill by which blue law repeal or modification is thought possible, were expected today if foes of the legislation found the situation favorable, due to a large number of its proponents having left for home.

Senator Frank J. Harris' old age pension bill, which in 1927 was blocked by the Grundy forces, may bring on today or next week a fight that will determine whether Grundy, the administration, or the antis of both forces can wield sufficient power to dominate.

BANK DEVICE BALKS ROBBERS

Bank robbers had better change their occupation. John Alagna, 40, of Slovan, Pa., has invented a protection system for banks, trust companies and business institutions which he believes is foolproof. He said:

Mr. Alagna

"A watchman in a bullet-proof booth overlooking the room presses an electric button which operates an electric bulb on a signal board in the nearest police station. Another button rings a burglar alarm outside the institution to attract passersby."

Alagna, born in Sicily, has been an American citizen since 1910. He works in a mine.

He said:

"I read in the papers about large numbers of bank robberies. After thinking about it for a long time, the whole idea came to me in a flash. Bank authorities tell me it is the safest and surest method they have heard of."

He has two children, Johnny, 15, who attends Burgettstown High School and wants to be a musician, and Elizabeth, 11, at school.

GAITHER, AIDE OF TENER, DIES

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 1.—(AP.)—Walter H. Gaither, former public service commissioner and secretary to John K. Tener while the latter was governor, died last night in his home here.

Born in Erie in 1869, Gaither was for many years a political writer on the Pittsburgh Dispatch and later on the Pittsburgh Post. He left newspaper work in 1907 to become secretary to Tener when he was elected to Congress.

After serving in that capacity until near the end of Tener's term as governor, he was appointed Public Service Commissioner in 1915. He held that office six months. After that he was in the insurance business here.

Commenting at his home here on the death of Walter H. Gaither, ex-Gov. John K. Tener said Gaither was a "very competent man, with a true sense of trust." Tener said he "regretted very much to hear of his passing."

FIVE MEN HELD IN RUM DEATH

Five men, arrested in a raid at 1206 Clark street, were held today for homicide detectives following the finding of the body of Victor Wavinski, of 417 Market street, last night in Our alley.

At the county morgue an autopsy revealed that death was caused by alcoholism. Those held are George Fisher, of 1206 Clark street; Tom O'Malley, 23, of Van Brasm street; Charles Contom, 21, of 100 Hickory street; Melvin Dewald, 22, of 452 Michigan avenue, and William Snyder, 18, of Edgebrook avenue.

Dewald told detectives he found the man lying in Our alley, and that when he went into a place he said was conducted by Fisher at the Clark street address, he was thrown out. The raid followed.

FOUR ACCUSED IN OIL PLOT

Four residents of Western Pennsylvania were named defendants in a suit filed in Federal Court by the Pennerude Refining Company, a Delaware corporation, charging conspiracy to defraud the company through purchase of property in Rockland, Venango County, for $155,000, with knowledge that the actual value did not exceed $15,000.

The defendants are P. W. Leedom, of Erie; E. W. Russ, of Oil City, and N. F. Osmer, of Franklin, described as organizers of the company, and John L. Eakin, of Franklin, from whom the property was said to have been purchased.

Yesterday's statements by some of New York's big banks, prove that we still have money although we seem to have lost some of our confidence.

The Chase National Bank reports resources of 2 billions 517 millions. The National City Bank on March 25 had resources of $1,842,075,588.

Soon, let us hope, prosperity will return like Little Bo Peep's sheep and all will be cheerfulness again.

THE DEATH of Delancey Nicoll, well known lawyer, in his 77th year, interests those acquainted with the recent history of New York.

MR. NICOLL'S arrival in a better world, bringing the latest news, will interest the late Thomas F. Ryan, who according to the late J. P. Morgan, "could have been the richest man in the world had he cared to take the trouble."

Mr. Nicoll was one of Mr. Ryan's lawyers, and Mr. Ryan married Mr. Nicoll's sister.

IT WAS in his support of Delancey Nicoll for the office of district attorney of New York that the late Joseph Pulitzer made one of his most savage fights. It is believed that the nervous shock of Nicoll's defeat in that campaign and the victory of his opponent, Fellows, caused Mr. Pulitzer to lose the sight of one eye.

He was a member of Rodef Shalom Temple, the Concordia Club and the Westmoreland Country Club.

Mr. Cohen was born in New York and came to Parkers Landing as a youth. In 1877 he located in Pittsburgh, engaging in the grain business with L. I. Aaron & Co., retiring in 1907.

CONCESSION UP TO ARMSTRONG

Over C. C. McGovern's protest, his two colleagues on the Board of County Commissioners voted, on E. V. Babcock's motion, to authorize Chairman Joseph G. Armstrong to employ a concessionaire for the refreshment stands in the two county parks. McGovern urged:

"Let's advertise and get bids from responsible business firms to handle this business. We don't want any bootleggers, fly-by-nights or ward heelers doing it."

Armstrong replied:

"I might say that if the chairman appoints any person he will not be a bootlegger, fly-by-night or ward heeler, but, on the contrary, one who is just as honest and respectable as any member of this board."

The concessions originally were in charge of George (Nipper) Byrnes, who did not appear at the parks last season and was reported at different times to be in Cleveland and Chicago.

ROSSITER CASE POSTPONED

The hearing of arguments on the motion of Samuel Y. Rossiter, an Erie attorney, for a new trial in the prisoner substitution case, scheduled for tomorrow morning before Federal Judge Nelson McVicar, has been postponed one week.

The later date was allowed by Judge McVicar, at the request of Attorney Charles J. Margiotti, of Punxsutawney, Pa., who joined the defense counsel for the Erie attorney. Rossiter was convicted March 21, when the Federal District Court was sitting in Erie.

United States Attorney Louis E. Graham and his assistants are engaged in preparing objections to a new trial and to the supplementary petition of Rossiter seeking permission to cross-examine certain government witnesses relative to their knowledge of material facts regarding the case, which Rossiter alleged were not disclosed at the trial.

SEIZE BREWERY IN WOODS RUN

Arrested by prohibition agents and constables in a raid on a wildcat brewery at 3023 Preble avenue, across the street from the Woods Run Police Station, R. A. Highton, 40, alleged proprietor, was at liberty on bond pending a hearing before a justice of the peace, according to the agents.

Several barrels of beer were reported found and more than 1,800 gallons of mash destroyed. Other beer-making paraphernalia was seized.

A half gallon of whisky, found in an oven in a restaurant at 4616 Baum boulevard, led to the arrest, agents said, of John H. Coffey, 35, and Mrs. Loretta Coffey, 37. Coffey was held in bond and the woman was released on her own recognizance.

Tony Demare, 50, was arrested after agents reported they seized a 100-gallon still at 3164 Griffith street. Demare was released on his own recognizance.

Rainy Easter Seen By Prophet; Fall Cyclone

WASHINGTON, Pa., April 1.—Easter will not be favorable for spring bonnets and new coats, according to Paul K. Schimmack, Washington's astrologer-weather prophet, who says there will be rain that day. April rainfall will equad that of March, with a big snow throughout the East April 27 and 28. May and June will be rainy, but July, August and September will be moderately dry. A cyclone will strike the East in October or November, wrecking ships and endangering tall buildings.

Cosmetic Styling

As Presented By

V. E. MEADOWS

of Hollywood, California

V. E. Meadows, consulting cosmetician, will present a series of lectures to Pittsburgh women, under the auspices of the Sun-Telegraph, revealing the art of make-up as it is practiced by America's most beautiful women of the screen.

Each afternoon and evening, beginning Monday, April 6, and continuing through until Friday afternoon, April 10, Mr. Meadows will lecture on the delicate but not too difficult art of make-up that does not show and yet accents every charm. He will illustrate with living models each point in his lecture.

Mr. Meadows will give you information on The care of the skin, scientific care of the hair; the care of the hands; costume colors with relation to make-up and the individual's personality; shaping the hair correctly to give contour to the face; every detail of correct cosmetic styling and the finer technique of successful make-up. What HE has done for Hollywood's beauties, YOU can do for yourself.

You are invited to attend these lectures as the guest of the Sun-Telegraph.

"Many beautiful women," says Mr. Meadows, "are concealing their beauty by the improper use of beauty artifices. Yet America's screen stars, who are not more blessed with nature's goods than other women, know how to use make-up to enhance that which nature gave them, and as a result are the beautiful women of the country. Every woman, young or old," he says, "can have the individuality of the screen star."

Mr. Meadows speaks with authority. He is America's foremost cosmetic stylist, and has been consulting cosmetician to most of America's screen stars and moving picture studios. He is coming to Pittsburgh to give a series of lectures to the professional women, the business women, the housewives and school girls of Pittsburgh, instructing them in the proper use of make-up: How to make-up for the evening, for the workday, how to bring out your own facial beauties and conceal your make-up, how to make your make-up stay on all day long!

You will enjoy every minute of these lectures, so don't fail to attend. As the number of seats is limited it will be necessary to obtain special tickets. They are free, of course, and will be mailed promptly if you will fill out and mail in the coupon below. The afternoon lectures (April 6-7-8-9-10, at 2:30 o'clock), will be held in PIRATE HALL in the WILLIAM PENN HOTEL; the evening lectures (April 6-7-8-9, at 8 o'clock), in the GOLD ROOM, FORT PITT HOTEL. Indicate on the coupon which lecture you wish to attend.

Mr. Meadows will impart the richness of his twenty years' experience in the art of make-up in this series of lectures sponsored by the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. But remember, his engagement is limited to five afternoon and four evening lectures. Admission will be by ticket only and the seating capacity of the two halls is limited. Easter Vacation Begins at Tech

Carnegie Tech students were to start Easter vacation at the conclusion of classes today. The holidays last until April 7.

PARENTS BREAK SCHOOL STRIKE

DANVILLE, Va., April 1.—(AP.)—"Strike-breaking" activities of parents were evidenced by the return of approximately a third of the Danville Military Institute students who left the school following refusal of the administration to grant an Easter holiday.

Less than 20 out of the student body of nearly a hundred remained in the barracks Monday night, but class activities were resumed yesterday with an attendance of approximately 40. During the day messages were received from parents of a number of other students saying they were being sent back with the understanding that they were subject to disciplinary action.

A faculty meeting was held at which forms of punishment were discussed.

U. S. SEIZES 9 IN DOPE RAID

CHICAGO, April 1.—(INS.)—Nine persons and $25,000 worth of drugs were seized here today by federal narcotic agents in a raid on a North Side apartment.

Names of the prisoners were not revealed.

Because city detectives were summoned to aid in the questioning, it is believed the raid may have some connection with the slaying Monday night of Max Tendler, New York gang spy and police informer.

Tendler, a Capone henchman, and leader in a nation-wide drug ring, was shot to death in front of a hotel here by two assassins.

Film Party Shooting Held Accidental

LOS ANGELES, April 1.—(AP.)—Police announced they had completed their investigation into the shooting Sunday night of Jack O'Brien, automobile dealer, and were convinced it was accidental.

O'Brien was shot in the left ankle during an alleged drinking party at the home of Eddie Gribbon, film comedian. Police said stories of others at the party convinced them O'Brien had shot himself while playing with the gun.

TWO AWARDED VAIL MEDALS

Allard J. Davids and Wilbur O. Root, Turtle Creek employes of the Bell Telephone Company of Pennsylvania, will be awarded Vail medals for first aid work which saved a boy's life, it was announced today by F. J. Chesterton, vice president of the company.

The medals are awarded annually to Bell employes in recognition of acts or services illustrating the ideals of public service held by the late President Theodore N. Vail, of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company.

Those cited for honorable mention are Jed Clifford Moser, of 5105 Kent street; Otto G. Scheidler, of 226 Chester avenue, and George R. Woteska, of 104 Penn street, Sharpsburg.

BOY ARRESTED OVER NUMBERS

John Mesko, 16, of Braddock, today was released from the county jail, where he had been sentenced for 30 days for disorderly conduct, but he was rearrested by county detectives after he told Judge Ambrose B. Reid he was a "numbers writer."

Mesko, in court to petition his release on a writ of habeas corpus, told the judge that he "wrote numbers for a man in Braddock." County detectives said they expect to arrest the boy's employer.

This was the second admission of its kind by witnesses in court. Detectives are already investigating an alleged Hill District "numbers racket," uncovered when a witness in Common Pleas Court said he was a "writer," and gave the name of the man who hired him.

Jury Opens Marathon Season

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

been granted an old age pension.

The law has one consolation. The jury is still there. In some of our graft cases the jury went out and never came back at all.

After all, jury duty is a legalized guessing contest. You can't get on one if you have formed an opinion, read a newspaper or attended a lecture on anything.

You can get better verdicts by standing on a weighing machine. That not only gives you your correct weight but also tells your fortune on the back of the card.

The prisoner in the Boston case isn't worrying if the jury never comes back. And, if it does, he's probably got a cousin or two on it.

Nevada has legalized all games of chance including divorce.

Roulette, faro, poker, dice and other financial methods of subsidizing the evening are now legitimate.

Why not carry it a bit further and permit the happy citizens of Nevada to print their own money?

It takes gravy to gamble even when you have brought your own dice.

And the beautiful divorcees are going to have lovely sessions in the court when the jury makes a dinky award of $15 per week alimony.

The indignant lady then offers to high spade the jury to see if she gets $30 a week or nothing.

Attractive survivor of six quick husbands instructs her lawyer to bring action for increased alimony because the dice are rolling bad that week.

When the judge runs through the papers the lady hops up and yells:

"Give 'em a good shuffle. And let me cut 'em."

Then the jury asks for sandwiches, looks over and announces: "We'll play these."

The lady with the six husbands discards three and draws two.

Then they march over to the Silver Dollar Palace and let the croupier pull the answer out of a hat.

Reno ain't a bad place provided they still take I. O. U.'s.

That's all the alphabet a man needs anywhere.

We will be on the next train headed for the last frontier and we hope the frontier lasts till we get there.

All that Nevado requires to make it the perfect state of the Union is to rush a bill through legalizing the gold brick racket, the swamp real estate proposition and stuffling sponges up race horses' noses.

"A COUGH WOULD KILL MY PROGRAM"

Harriet Lee

"I GET colds, of course," says Miss Lee, popular radio contralto, "but I have to go on the air just the same. A cough would kill my program."

That's why, like many other radio artists, she has learned to rely on Pertussin. It's quick—and it's safe and pleasant to take. For Pertussin is made from a medicinal herb called thyme and is entirely free from narcotics and injurious, habit-forming drugs.

Broadcasting studios use Pertussin because it relieves coughs and eases the throat almost instantly. Doctors have prescribed it for over twenty-five years—especially for children.

Winter weather brings coughs. Watch out! Get Pertussin for quick relief. Stop in at the nearest druggist's for a bottle.

Defunct Sharon Bank To Pay 90 Per Cent

SHARON, Pa., April 1.—That depositors of the Dollar Title and Trust Company will receive at least 90 per cent of their money was the opinion expressed following the filing in Mercer County Court of the inventory and appraisal by Frank Jackson, special deputy of the State Banking Department. The bank closed its doors last November when Ralph Matthews, secretary-treasurer, confessed taking $174,000 of the funds.

Reception Planned For Canon Stokes

A reception in honor of the Rev. D. Anson Phelps Stokes, canon of Washington Cathedral, Edwin N. Lewis, editor of the Cathedral Age, and the members of the Pittsburgh Committee of the National Cathedral Association will be held in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund W. Mudge, 1000 Morewood avenue, Wednesday evening, April 8. Canon Stokes will give an illustrated lecture on recent progress in the cathedral undertaking in Washington.

ACID after meals

GET RID of your dread of pain after eating. Eat without fear of "indigestion," sour stomach, disagreeable gas or headaches.

When your food ferments, "disagrees," lies like a lump in your stomach, it's a sign of too much acid. You need not resort to crude methods—take instead an anti-acid that will correct the condition. Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

A spoonful of this pleasant-tasting, soothing fluid neutralizes many times its volume in acid. It restores the proper alkaline balance to an acid-soaked stomach and bowels—assists these organs to function as they should.

Phillips' Milk of Magnesia is what you need when a bad breath, coated tongue, headaches, nausea or biliousness indicates an over-acid condition. Take a spoonful today and for several days and see how it sweetens the system. You won't be nearly so liable to colds or sickness. All drugstores — in 25c and 50c bottles.

Genuine Milk of Magnesia is always a liquid—never a tablet. Look for the name Phillips on the bottle.

HOLLYWOOD AND GOTHAM IN REVIEW; LOCAL AMUSEMENT EVENTS

United Artists Studio Now On the Lookout for New And Young Faces

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, April 1.

Youth will be served. Even conservative United Artists have felt the call of spring, and is out to sign up all the promising youngsters it can find.

Samuel Goldwyn, who seldom is caught napping, set the new plan in motion when he assigned Busby Berkeley, former Broadway dance director, to winnow the wheat from the chaff. Already, Berkeley has interviewed 1,000 young hopefuls and has made 500 tests. He will continue to devote three nights a week to the job.

First result is the signing of 17-year-old, blonde Betty Grable to a five-year contract. Lucky Miss Grable was one of the dancers in Mr. Goldwyn's production of "Whoopee."

Samuel Goldwyn

It is the plan of the new United Artists boss to sign up four more girls and to put the entire lot under the tutelage of Laura Hope Crewes. They will be given small parts, and will be groomed for stardom. If Schoolmistress Crewes develops two real finds out of her five chances, Mr. Goldwyn and everybody else will be happy.

This project is one of the most convincing signs of life that has come out of United Artists in several months. Following upon the coup in signing up Super-Dressmaker Gabrielle Chanel, it looks as if the Goldwyn blood transfusion is going to give real zip to an organization that was becoming dangerously self-satisfied.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

At last the Russians have got what was coming to them for having those infernal names. The booking agents for a vaudeville circuit sent out a hurry-up call last week for an act to go to Oakland. The first manager to reach its office suggested a Russian string orchestra.

"How do you spell the name?" asked the booker.

The manager started off confidently:

"Vaz—va-va—" suddenly, he got red in the face. "Oh, to heck with it," he exclaimed. "I've got another act called 'Six Seals,' why don't you take that?"

LATEST GOSSIP

Thwarted for four years in her attempts to get a European vacation, Lilyan Tashman has a clause in her new Paramount contract, giving her the privilege of taking time off this summer to go abroad ... R-K-O-Pathe has bought a short story, "Gangster's Wife," for the use of one situation and the title. They will grafted onto Jack Lait's "Put on the Spot"..... Evelyn Brent now has joined the Hollywood order of swimming pool owners. It goes with her new house overlooking the film capital ... A perfect example of taking it out of the right pocket and putting it into the left is First National's purchase of Lloyd Bacon's contract from Warner Brothers. They wanted him for a picture and he already was assigned to the Warner film, "Sideshow." The shenanigan about the contract did the trick...One of the year's greatest tragedies is the case of Andy Bennison, author of the Bobby Jones golf series. Before his current assignment, Andy consistently broke 70 on the golf course. Since Bobby Jones has been showing him the proper stance and how to correct his game, he hasn't once been able to crack 90...Having done a cracking good job in filming "Mother's Millions," Liberty is pocketing a nice profit through the sale of the picture to Universal. Such things brighten the independent's world.

Lilyan Tashman

SHE'LL HAVE A BUSY SPRING

One of the greatest things about Hollywood is that when it does thaw out, the sky's the limit.

Marion Schilling just couldn't get started in the talkies. Then one day Pathe signed her to a long term contract. Within a short time, came the opportunity to play the lead opposite Richard Dix in "Big Brother." Now, on top of this, the young actress has been assigned to the second feminine lead in Constance Bennett's "The Common Law."

While we're on the subject, this picture has been postponed a week to allow Connie to recover from a painful case of sunburn.

North African Tour By Holmes Tonight

Burton Holmes will continue his current season of pictured stories of travel in Carnegie Music Hall tonight with the presentation of "The North African Tour." This is heralded as a visual record of a journey through Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia, with a detour to Biskra and the Garden of Allah.

Magic and Spooks Interest Hamilton

Neil Hamilton, Norma Shearer's leading man in "Strangers May Kiss," has a novel way of amusing his guests. He has his home fitted with a "talking vase" and other spiritualistic seance accoutrements and loves to mystify visitors with his spooky tricks. He is also a clever amateur magician.

Taxi Dancer

Barbara Stanwyck is seen as a taxi dancer in "Ten Cents a Dance," picture to open Friday in the Stanley.

SPECIAL JUBILEE BILL FEATURES THEATERS NEXT WEEK

Easter Week this year will witness a special amusement event. From coast to coast in every city and every town, this holiday period has been designated as "Players' and Patrons' Jubilee Week." Big shows are being planned and special features will be presented in every playhouse throughout the United States and Canada.

A definite idea of the far-reaching importance of this celebration is found in its sponsorship. The executive committee is made up of Sam Katz, president Publix Theaters; Hiram S. Brown, president Radio-Keith-Orpheum; Will H. Hays, M. P. P. D. A.; Harley L. Clarke, president Fox Theaters; Nicholas Schenck, president Loew Theaters, and Harry M. Warner, president Warner Brothers Theaters.

Virtually every theater in America will run the two-reel feature, "The Stolen Jools," with 55 of the greatest stars in the movie industry in the cast, the week of the jubilee. All Warner theaters and Loew houses and the Sheridan Square Theater in Pittsburgh will run the film. Collections are to be made in each of the theaters immediately after the showing of the film. The proceeds go to help tubercular artists, who are given every need in the NVA Sanatorium.

She's a Spy!

Marlene Dietrich portrays a spy in "Dishonored," the new film coming to the Penn Friday.

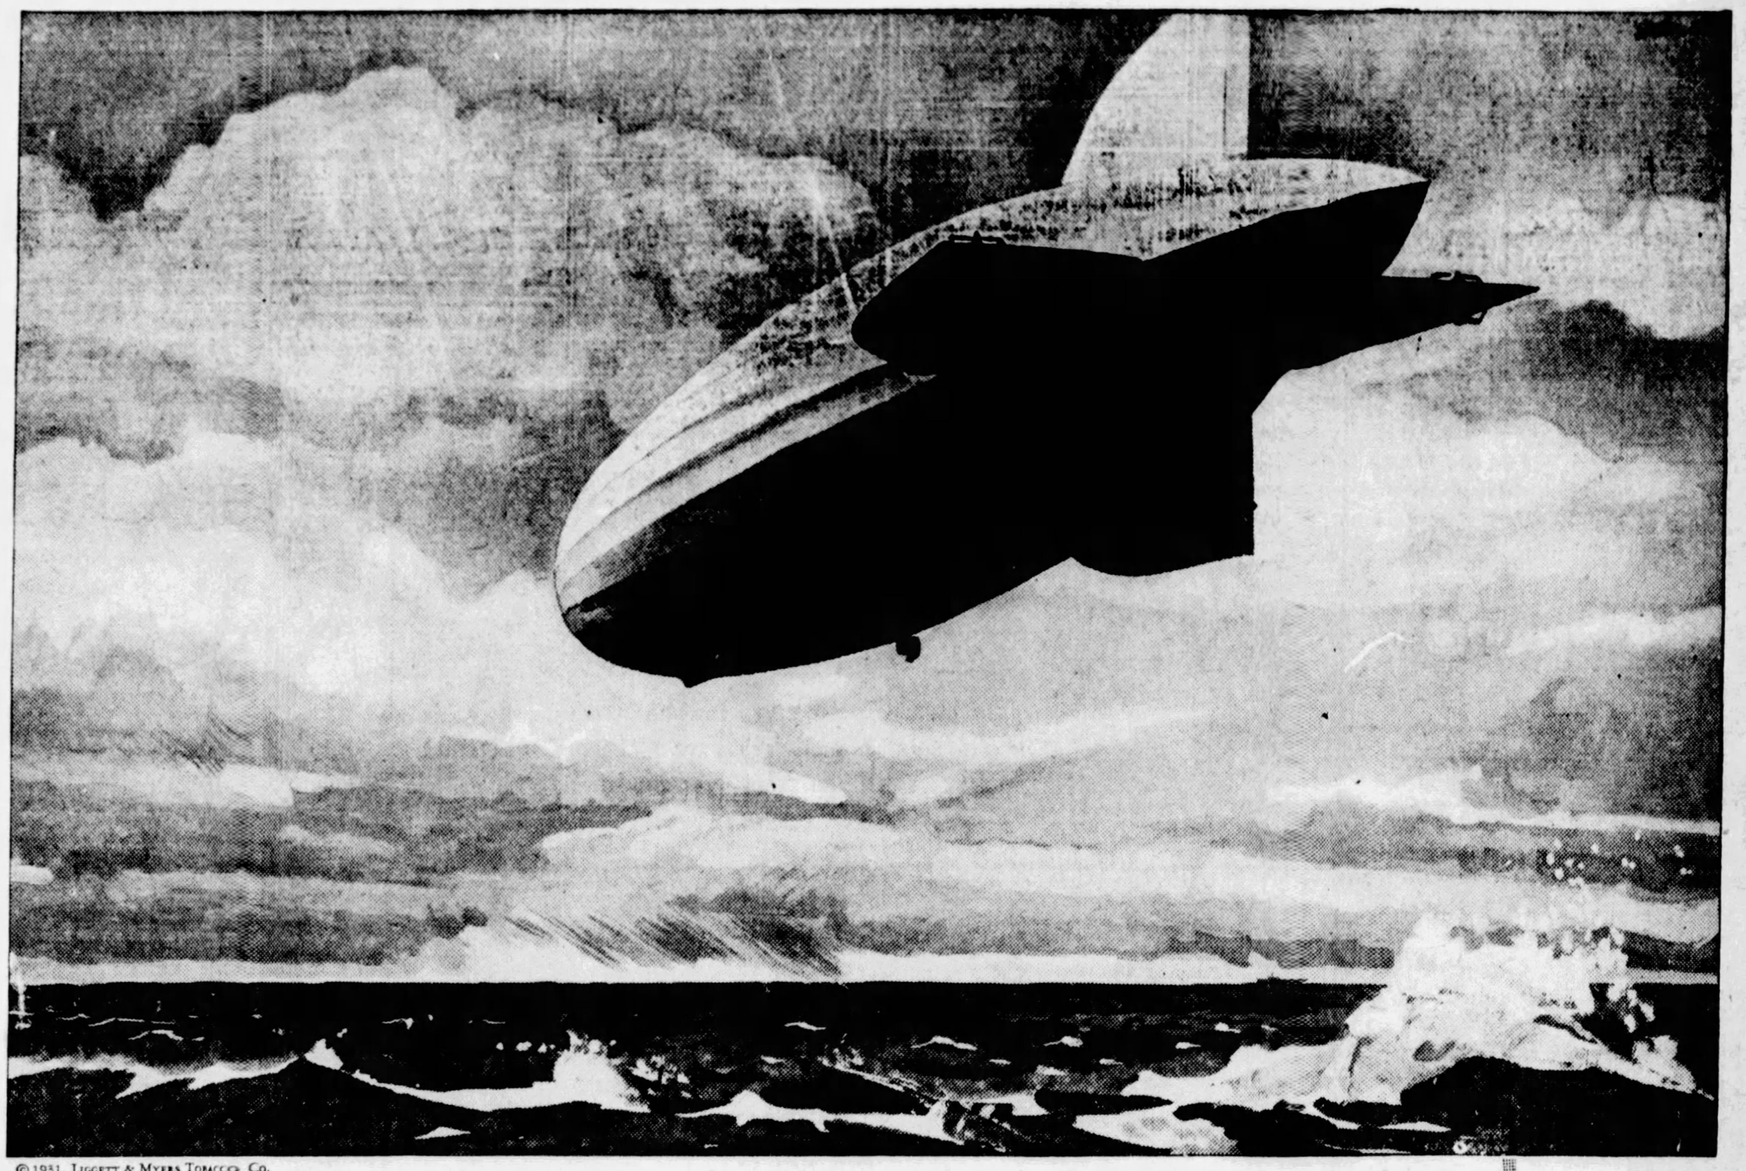
"I've flown with the Pathfinders of the Air —says Chesterfield



© 1931, Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co.

Yet you meet me in the city's crowded canyons"

Along the invisible lanes of the air, or among jostling thousands in the city's streets . . . it's all the same to Chesterfield. For here's a cigarette that goes everywhere, and that tastes right anywhere. Milder and better tobaccos —nothing else—that's what you taste in Chesterfield. And, thanks to the "cross-blend," all of that mild, good taste and aroma is retained!

Chesterfield

They Satisfy —that's Why!

FOR NINETEEN years, our Research Department has kept intimate touch with every new development of Science that could be applied to the manufacture of cigarettes. During this period there has been no development of tested value or importance to the smoker which we have not incorporated into the making of Chesterfield cigarettes.

Plays, Players and By-Play

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Mebbe the story of "Trader Horn" isn't true, as some scoffers scoff, but when the Nixon screen next week shows a picture of a zebra licking a lion—p'raps we should say kicking—we're going to believe it whether its true or not. Harry Brown assures us this is just one of many unbelievable things in "Trader," which will look for trade as often as twice a day in the Nixon next week. Harry Carey and Edwina Booth are featured in it. The b. o. will attend to seat shoppers tomorrow and thereafter.

Can it be that curtains rise tardily in our theaters because there is a shortage of yeast?

* * *

Hist! Lissen here! Leading players in the company of "Blossom Time," operetta about Franz Schubert, with his own music, have made up a stage library, all of Schubert biographies and music! Nobody—positively nobody—can win any arguments with them now. Mister T. D. Bonneville, mgr. of the Alv., wants everybody to know there's no secret about the time of opening "B. T." in that theater. He says its Saturday night of this week, no matter what the effect on the bathing habit may be.

The dancing lassies we see in the Penn and Stanley may have no lines to speak, but those they show are quite effective.

* * *

"Stepping Sisters" will stalk into George Sharp's stock company in the Pitt next Monday in the persons of Ruby Blackburn and Loretta Brown, members of the original cast that appeared in the play in Winchellburg. Regular Sharpers will support 'em, except such as may be on vacation. Performances will be on the usual routine.

PALLETTE, FAZENDA IN SCREEN ROMANCE

Louise Fazenda, whose comedy is at its best when associated with a big motion picture love affair, has unusual opportunities to exercise this in "Gun Smoke," new starring vehicle for Richard Arlen.

Louise's big moments in this picture have to do with the hefty Eugene Pallette.

"Gene is so heavy it's a wonder they can even throw his image on the screen," chirps Louise. "He's one of the most comfortable screen lovers I've ever been hugged by."

"Riding around on horses the way he did in this picture, I thought he'd reduce some. But he just reduced the horse. After he got through riding his nag looked like a camel.

"He's a great fellow. But if he ever steps on your foot it's three months in the hospital."

Pallette and Miss Fazenda are screen sweethearts in the Arlen picture.

DOROTHY LEE SIGNED FOR M-G-M PICTURES

Dorothy Lee, who has been playing ingenue roles on the New York stage for two seasons and recently had a part in the Theater Guild's "Green Grow the Lilacs," has been signed to a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer screen contract. Her first picture role has not yet been announced.

Miss Lee is five feet six, with blonde hair and brown eyes. She is a graduate of Miss Bennett's School for Girls, and for a season, after completing her education, appeared with the Duffy Stock Company on the West Coast.

DON'T WISH FOR RELIEF—GET IT

Read What Konjola Did for Former Champion Wrestler and Tattoo Artist.

Don't fear that there is no relief from rheumatism, stomach trouble, jumpy nerves, or from headaches, dizzy spells, or from irregular kidneys and bowels. Put Konjola to the test...it has helped others, and there is every reason to believe it can bring relief to you. Here is what "Sailor" Jack Wills, former middleweight champion wrestler and the only tattoo artist in the world who holds a United States Government tattoo permit, says about Konjola:

"SAILOR" JACK WILLS

"I had to give up wrestling because of terrible stomach and kidney conditions, and because of nervousness I was about to give up work at my studio at No. 8 Federal street. Well, six bottles of Konjola ended my stomach and kidney troubles, and I feel twenty years younger. My nerves now are just as steady as if they were made of steel. I give Konjola all the credit."

Mrs. Alice McKane, 1416 Dickerson street, Philadelphia, too, is enthusiastic about Konjola. She says:

MRS. ALICE McKANE

"I was tired, had no ambition, and pains in my back and shoulders gave me trouble. My appetite was poor, and I could not sleep soundly at night. I had frequent headaches. After using six bottles of Konjola I feel better than in years, my appetite is fine, I sleep well, and pains have disappeared."

And are not the words of Mrs. J. E. Griser, 511 Shawano street, Pittsburgh, encouraging, indeed? She says of Konjola:

"For a year I suffered from nervousness. I did not sleep soundly, meals did me no good, and nothing I tried did any good. Konjola was the first and only medicine to help me. I enjoy my meals and sleep better than I have for months, and I am glad to endorse such a medicine."

MRS. J. E. GRISER

Get a treatment of Konjola... from six to eight bottles... give Konjola a chance that is all it asks.

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfaff

William Pfaff

If somebody tells you to call Highland 0636 and ask for Mr. Wolf today, don't call. That's our warning to you. This is April Fools' Day and that's the Highland Zoo number. We called up the zoo yesterday to ask whether it were true that they didn't answer the phone on fools' day, because of such calls, but they weren't even answering yesterday. We were all set to ask for Mr. Hippopotamus, and it would have been a great joke on us had there been no hippopotamus at the zoo.

We never let an April Fools' Day pass without shaking our head and mumbling that this day is conclusive proof that the very younger generation today is more sophisticated than ever. In our day (those good old days, sonny) the boys and girls took every advantage of the day. The empty purse tied to a string which was jerked back as the pedestrian stooped to claim it; the call from the telephone company; the old hat which concealed a brick and was so tempting that the unwary victim couldn't resist the invitation to bury a sole in its crown.

Boys and girls don't indulge in such harmless jokes any more. Or if they do, they're making us look foolish.

A recent development has convinced the volunteer firemen of Ingram that prohibition, if thoroughly enforced, would be a good thing for this here country. A few mornings ago, at 5 a. m., the volunteers were sleeping soundly, as all volunteers do, when the piercing fire siren echoed through the borough.

One after another they tumbled out of bed, slipped into their fire-fighting clothes and hurried to the fire engine house, prepared to rescue all who needed rescuing from the flames.

There were about 50 of 'em at the firehouse, all asking one another where the flames were. Nobody knew, because there were no flames. They found out later two young men who had been drinking had strolled into the dark firehouse, pressed a button to light the lights—and, of course, pressed the wrong button.

He said, "Sure, every now and then."

We had no comeback to that.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., April 1.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

We are becoming so hardened and used to about any misfortune, and bad luck that comes along, that it takes a mighty big calamity to shock all this country at once. But Knute, you did it. Just as you have come from behind all your life and fooled 'em where they thought you didn't have a chance, you did it again. We thought it would take a President or a great public man's death to make a whole nation, regardless of age, race or creed, shake their heads in real sincere sorrow and say, "Isn't it a shame he is gone." Well, that's what this country did, Knute, for you. You died one of our national heroes. Notre Dame was your address, but every gridiron in America was your home.

Yours, WILL.

Foch Massed Troops To Join British in Flanders Campaign

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH

Generalissimo of the Allied Armies During the Last Phases of the World War.

Translated from the French by Col. T. Bentley Mott.

CHAPTER IV.

This second period of the war which followed the Battle of the Marne, was baptized "The Race to the Sea." It sounds well, but it does not give a true idea of the operations nor does it really reflect the idea on which these operations were based.

The race was towards the enemy. It was his right wing that we attempted to outflank and envelop; when he outstripped us, it was his effort to outflank us that we warded off. For he was trying by increased speed to envelop us in a maneuver similar to our own. This produced on each side a race towards the northern wing of the opposing army.

At the same time, we had to check the enemy's advance and immobilize him on the remainder of the front; and this front was getting longer and longer. As a result of this symmetrical maneuver, the northern wing moved at an ever-increasing speed through the Ile de France, Picardy, Artois and Flanders, up to the North Sea. In this way, the sea marked the end of the maneuver, though it had never been its aim.

All along the road traversed, the efforts of each to outflank the other had ended in combats of front against front, bringing no decisive result. When finally the sea put an end to further progress, there ensued the Battle of Ypres. Here both sides sought a decision in a supreme effort to break through hastily improvised defenses.

Marshal Foch

After a race lasting a full month, the Allied forces which had shattered the enemy's invasion at the Marne again checked his march on the banks of the Yser, and by saving the Channel ports strengthened the coalition and consolidated the Franco-British union. If they failed to overthrow the German Army in a decisive victory, they at least demolished all its plans by closing in its face the last door by which it could win . . .

Great wars, especially those in which several allied nations are engaged, as well as the important battles they involve, cannot be considered merely from the viewpoint of each of the groups of forces participating. They constitute a whole,

COUNTY SEEKS WABASH DEAL FIGURES

Bridge, Tube Appraisal by Real Estate Board Group Asked by Commissioners

R. R. Cappe, real estate officer of the Fidelity Trust Company, and president of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, has been authorized by the County Commissioners to appoint a committee from the real estate board to appraise property to be acquired by the county in buying the Wabash Railroad bridge and tunnel for vehicular traffic arteries.

No formal contract for the purchase has been agreed upon, but the county commissioners have tacitly agreed to take over the properties for $3,000,000 and spend about $1,000,000 to put the bridge and tunnel in condition for use.

McGOVERN ASKS APPRAISER

Cappe's prospective appointees were authorized after Commissioner C. C. McGovern had asked his colleagues to give him an appraiser to report the value of real estate the county proposed to buy. McGovern contended that Commissioners Joseph G. Armstrong and Edward V. Babcock had command of information collected by two real estate appraisers in the Department of Public Works who ignored McGovern.

Armstrong and Babcock refused to consider McGovern's request and defended the proposed Cappe appointees, who will be paid by the county at a rate comparable with that paid "by the Pittsburgh Board of Public Education and the City of Pittsburgh" for similar services.

RECALLS CITY HALL FIGURES

McGovern recalled that appraisers from the real estate board placed the same valuation on the Old City Hall in 1924 as a previous committee from the same organization had reported in 1917, despite the generally accepted theory of 5 per cent increase yearly. The valuation in both instances was about $1,600,000, he said, continuing:

"I have no quarrel with the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board, but I know it does not include all real estate brokers in the downtown section. The board certainly did not come to the rescue of the county when we had to pay $8 a square foot for the Town Hall site."

John, 2805 Louisiana street, with his pal, Paul, 2740 Louisiana street, discussing the near-tragedy at a tiny pool of water, five feet deep. Their pal, Donald Fuchs, 2805 Louisiana avenue, fell in. John fished him out with a stick when no police came to help.

SAVES PAL AS POLICE ARGUE

While Dormont and Pittsburgh police departments yesterday were debating over whose district included a swimming hole at the foot of Louisiana avenue, a 5-year-old lad, with the aid of a stick, fished his companion, also 5, from six feet of water into which he had fallen while playing.

A "hunting trip" had taken 5-year-old Donald Fuchs, of 2805 Louisiana avenue, and his two companions, Paul Jennis, 6, of 2740 Louisiana avenue, and John Faucett, 5, of 2738 Louisiana avenue, to the edge of the swimming hole they had constructed during the summer.

Donald ventured too near the edge, and slipped into the water. His screaming attracted neighbors, who called police. Dormont police said the vicinity was in the city, and Pittsburgh police declared it was in Dormont. No police came.

Meanwhile, Donald was in the water, but before neighbors could rescue him, John Faucett secured a large stick, offered one end of it to Donald, and pulled him out.

John's mother, Mrs. Fay Faucett, carried Donald home, where he was given a warm bath and food. He is reported in good health today.

LABOR FUND FOR WORK BY CITY

Only Tube City Residents Will Be Employed on Projects; Plan Campaign

The Allegheny County Emergency Association operating committee, under chairmanship of Frank R. Phillips, yesterday authorized expenditure of $13,300 to pay labor costs on four public work projects to be instituted by the city of McKeesport.

Philip Mathews, executive director of the association, said the men to work on the jobs will be residents of McKeesport who are receiving relief from welfare agencies.

Final instructions for the emergency association's campaign for $3,000,000, April 6-20, were given to chairmen and vice chairmen of Division "A," under the general chairman, Walter C. Carroll, at meetings yesterday in the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. This unit has been assigned the task of raising approximately $1,000,000 from wealthy individuals and professional men and women. Division "B" workers, the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce unit, under General Chairman T. P. Gaylord, who will campaign for $2,000,000, received their instructions Monday. Chairman Gaylord's workers will solicit one day's payroll, based on 1929, from corporations in Allegheny County, and will urge each employe in these concerns to contribute voluntarily one day's pay.

The issuing of councilmanic bonds in the amount of $100,000 to provide materials for labor to be furnished by the Allegheny County Emergency Fund has been approved by the finance committee of City Council. The program of work contemplated includes a number of street and sewer jobs.

SUBWAY TERMS CONSIDERED

Contract negotiations are under way between the Pittsburgh Railways Company and the City Transit Commission for the operation of the proposed $6,000,000 downtown subway by the company.

When an agreement is reached it will be presented to Council for ratification. Numerous sessions between officials of the Railways company and the commission have been held, to deliberate terms.

$5,000,000 STEEL ORDER TO BE FILLED HERE FOR P. R. R.

HUGE TONNAGE ASSURED MILLS

Eight Companies Will Share $7,500,000 Requisitions, $4,500,000 in Pittsburgh

The Pennsylvania Railroad has placed orders for nearly $5,000,000 worth of steel to be manufactured in the Pittsburgh district, it was announced today. Eight companies shared in contracts calling for approximately $7,500,000 worth of structural steel and accessories which were let yesterday.

The share of the Pittsburgh mills is approximately $4,500,000, since all but two of the companies will use Pittsburgh steel.

In addition, railroad officials announced that orders for $200,000 worth of steel, all of which will be made in Pittsburgh, had been let recently. The largest of these orders was given to the Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation for 1,860 tons of piling for the foundation of the new Philadelphia terminal.

BRIDGE WORKS ORDER

Another order for 600 tons of structural steel has been let to the Fort Pitt Bridge Works at Canonsburg, it was announced. This steel will be used for an overhead highway bridge at Weirton, W. Va. Still more orders totaling $100,000 for signal, power and electrical equipment have been announced.

The total of orders is expected to create work for many men in the Pittsburgh district. The material contracted for by the Pennsylvania Railroad is to be used in the road's $175,000,000 improvement program, recently announced, including electrification between New York and Washington, and terminal improvements at Newark and Philadelphia.

STRUCTURAL PROJECTS

The structural steel orders amounting to $7,500,000 call for 100,000 tons of steel, as follows: American Bridge Company, Ambridge, 26,000 tons; Ingals Iron Works, Verona, 13,000 tons; Mt. Vernon Bridge Company, Mt. Vernon, O., 4,300 tons; Fort Pitt Bridge Works, Canonsburg, 4,000 tons; McClintic-Marshall Steel Corporation, Steelton and Pottstown, Pa., 34,000 tons; Shoemaker Bridge Company, Pottstown, 14,000 tons; Lehigh Structural Steel Company, Allentown, Pa., 4,000 tons, and the Phoenix Bridge Company, Pottstown, 1,300 tons.

Nearly one-half the steel ordered is to be used in speeding work of electrifying the Pennsylvania's New York-Washington lines. A total of 47,000 tons of fabricated steel is being purchased for steel poles, cross arms, beams and braces to carry power lines for overhead signal bridges and for sub-stations. Work is to start immediately on the Philadelphia terminal, requiring 18,000 tons of steel.

Steel for three new bridges over the Passaic River, approaching the site of the new station at Newark, as well as for the station, platforms, viaducts and track bridges at that point will total an additional 24,000 tons.

CITY WILL PAY MOST OF COST IN MINE FIRE

Crafton Urged to Act Soon, Bearing One-Third Share; Two Plans Considered

The city of Pittsburgh has agreed to spend two-thirds of the money required to extinguish the Crafton coal mine fire, but Crafton Council has been asked to do its part at once in fighting the menace.

On motion by Councilman W. Y. English, the Finance Committee of City Council agreed to ask the Crafton authorities to spend their $3,333 at once in fighting the fire according to the method of the borough engineer, Webster Hinnau. The fire is on the McShane property near the borough line.

Then, with the city's and Crafton's engineering ideas both on display, a committee of mining engineers and other coal men will be asked to decide which is better.

Hinnau, who claimed recently at a Borough Council meeting that the city's method of excavating to cut off the fire is extravagant, proposes to make a broad cut for the first 20 feet in depth with a steam shovel, and then dig a trench 10 to 12 feet wide with a ditch-digger for the remaining 20 feet.

TYPICAL SHOPPER MAKING ROUNDS

JEWS PREPARE FOR PASSOVER

Jewish merchants throughout Pittsburgh were busy until late last night supplying approved food for the eight-day Passover period starting at sundown tonight.

"Pesach," the joyous Hebrew festival celebrating the passing of the angel over the homes of the Israelites when the Egyptian first-borns were stricken, will be observed throughout the world as "Zeman Cherusenu"—Season of Emancipation.

Yesterday, housewives in all orthodox Jewish homes, burned the leaven, and neither flour nor leavened bread will be permitted in the homes until the eight-day period is completed. In its place, Jews will eat matzoth, the unleavened bread.

Following short services in the synagogues this evening, the Sedar will be celebrated in the Jewish homes, when benedictions will be recited over four cups of wine, a bit of parsley, unleavened cakes, scraped apple and horse-radish —the bitter herb.

At this ceremony the children ask their parents the "four questions," an old Hebrew tradition.

CHARGES PITT VOTE FRAUD

Collegians, too, have their troubles, just as politicians do. Charges of irregularities at the polls today followed the defeat of a plain to install a new students' self governing association at University of Pittsburgh.

Emanuel Fishkin, head of the Men's Self Governing Association Committee, charged that students of the Dental School, opposed to the proposed constitution of the association, violated campus voting laws by voting en mass. Fishkin also charged that an election official, who was a dental student, influenced students to vote down the constitution, which was defeated by a vote of 1,329 to 225.

Fishkin and his minority is trying to arrange a second vote.

Hickman Captors Win Reward Fight

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 1.—(INS.)—Captors of the "Fox," William Edward Hickman, convicted and hanged for the slaying of Marian Parker here in 1927, today had won their fight to collect a $10,000 reward offered by the City of Los Angeles. In addition the court held, Thomas C. Gurdane and E. L. Lieuallen, Oregon officers, should be paid 7 per cent interest for more than three years.

The annual program featuring compositions of women composers of the club was given yesterday in Memorial Hall by the Tuesday Musical. Ruth Stephens Porter, chairman of the manuscript division, had arranged the attractive program, which was given before a large and enthusiastic audience.

Composer Program

The first event was a group of four miniatures for string quartet, composed by Alice Menninger Stempel, and played by Della Herring, Consuelo B. Metzger, Carolyn St. John and Jean Wessner.

Elsie Breese Mitchell, soprano, next sang a group of unusual numbers by Josephine McGrail, a new member of the group, with Marion Clark Bollinger at the piano. Nellie Risher Roberts, composer, was represented by a group of violin solos beautifully played by Rose Meitlein Litt, with the composer at the piano.

District Women Indorse Mrs. J. M. Phillips as Federation Head

Mrs. John M. Phillips was unanimously indorsed for the presidency of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women at yesterday's southwestern district meeting in the Hotel Schenley. It was Mrs. John A. Frick's last appearance in the district as president and she prefaced her address by voicing her happiness over Mrs. Phillips' indorsement.

As Mrs. Frick is leaving the presidency after a splendid four years' record, she gave no forward look in her annual message. Instead she discussed several of the many things which have occupied the time and attention of the Federation under her administration—county libraries, the Wilkins Farm project, General Federation endowment legislation, Girl Scout co-operation, the establishment of headquarters in Harrisburg—and then added a word concerning publicity, stressing its importance, and spoke of the York convention of the State Federation in October and the General Federation Council meeting which opens April 27.

Mrs. Frick was presented with gifts from the Allegheny County and Beaver County federations and Mrs. John E. McKirdy, who is retiring from the district presidency after four years in office, was also presented with a gift from Allegheny County.

Judge Sara Soffel was the second speaker of the afternoon. In characteristically simple, straightforward manner, Miss Soffel told some of the more intimate things connected with her appointment to the bench, an account that held dramatic suspense for the women by reason of its very simplicity and its importance. Miss Soffel emphasized the honor and responsibility which have come not to her as an individual, but through her to all women.

Judge Speaks

Mrs. John M. Phillips spoke briefly concerning gardening plans by which it is hoped the club women may be able to relieve the unemployment situation. She urged that they encourage gardening in small communities, especially in mining and industrial centers. She suggested that the women buy seeds at wholesale prices and then conduct organized sales at the same price to the gardeners.

Mrs. William Nichols, of Duquesne, sang, accompanied by Mrs. W. J. Osborne, and Mrs. Ambrose N. Diehl brought greetings from the General Federation.

Nearly 300 members were registered, representing 11 counties and 64 clubs. Last night Mrs. Frick and other state officers were entertained at dinner in the Congress of Clubs.

In addition to Friday's speaker, Miss Edith Bane, the College Club will hear Dr. Leonard V. Koos, professor of secondary education in the University of Chicago; Dr. Eleanor Pancoast, acting dean of Goucher College, and Dorothy Metz Scott, reader, during April. Dr. Koos will talk on "The Junior College" and Dr. Pancoast on "The Flexibility of College Curricula." Mrs. Scott's program of readings will be given in conjunction with musical numbers by Christine Adams Jones, 'cello; Mrs. Howard A. Noble, violin, and Mrs. Harvey Schwab, piano.

College Club

The Auxiliary to the Allegheny Day Nursery and Temporary Home for Children will sponsor a card party in McCreery's dining room on April 10. The afternoon's entertainment will include a fashion show which will be staged through the courtesy of the store.

* * *

The State Federation of Pennsylvania Women will present Miss Mabel King, contralto, with Earl Mitchell as her accompanist, in a song recital during the weekly broadcast over KDKA tomorrow. Miss King has chosen a program appropriate to the season.

CUTS SILK HOSE BILLS IN TWO

A New York fashion expert has found a simple, easy method to double the wear of silk hose and undergarments. These articles, worn next to the skin, wear out doubly fast because of the perspiration and other body excretions which soften and rot the silk.

This lady found that soap and water were inadequate for washing such articles. She recommends when washing silks to add a tablespoonful of Energine to every quart of lukewarm, soapy water. Wash and rinse as usual. This method not only cleans thoroughly and quickly but makes silks like new with revived colors and pleasing freshness. The difference in results over the use of soap and water alone will amaze you. It means longer life—real economy.

Energine is unexcelled also for quickly removing all dirt and grease spots from dresses, hats, gloves and ties. Large can 35 cents at any drug store.

Illusion

Oh, well, in losing you, I found myself,
I am clear-eyed again—and strangely gay;
Old books that stood forgotten on the shelf,
Are friendly aids that help to smooth the way;
Old pipes relit—and gay, and laughing lads
To joke and chat and tip the friendly glass,
With love discarded now, like other fads—
For new allures that quickly rise and pass.

Yet now and then your ghost drifts back to me,
And I am conscious of an ancient pain;
The whispered vows of fervent constancy
Arouse their poignant memory again;

(Each smoke ring has your charming picture in it—
But they, like you, can vanish in a minute!)
—Young Man of Manhattan.

"30"

The hero of "Front Page," the grandest of the talkies in town, is the character called "Hildy" Johnson. Both the stage and the screen version revealed a great reporter in "Hildy," who was one of Chicago's best known and best liked criminal court chroniclers.

Hilding Johnson was his real name and the authors of "Front Page" could have paid him no greater tribute than they did in jotting the original down as he really was.

Hilding died the other day—at his job. Although physicians warned him about overworking. You see — the authors, Ben Hecht and Charles MacArthur, photographed a real newspaperman—not the sort you saw on the screen—until "Front Page" was born.

Gag

George White tells about the Old Man's Home for Jewish Veterans, where two graybeards were whiling away the time playing casino.

One of them took a nine with a seven.

"How can you do diss?" demanded the other.

"It's hard times," was the reply.

Izzy Elinsonisms

The Street has become crowded with burlesque theaters. So that's what the police meant by a "shake-up" on Broadway.

As if you didn't know—on Broadway everything comes to him who rates.

Keep Kissable, eh? The girl I was out with last night smoked so much that it was impossible to get near her lips.

Imagine!

To hear Phil Baker tell it, show business is at such a low level that Mr. Cain, who buries the failures in his storehouse, is trying to buy Madison Square Garden for an annex.

Incidentally

Another concrete example showing how low the gross receipts are in some Broadway theaters is offered in the following overhead repartee:

First Actor: "I saw your show rehearsing yesterday."

Second Actor: "That wasn't a rehearsal. That was our Saturday matinee!"

Heheheh

In a recent "Things I Never Knew Till Now" department it was recorded that the Chinese cannot pronounce the word business.

Russell Crouse remarks: "They probably don't have to."

How Columns Are Made

One of the redeeming features of doing this sort of stuff is that you never know from where your next paragraph will come. One moment it may come from a stage celebrity, a gangster, a producer, Mayor Walker, a waiter or a newsboy.

Henry Demar, frinstance, is the hustling newsboy who parks in front of Reuben's. He tell about the immigrant who applied for his first citizenship papers.

"What's the capital of the United States?" he was aked.

And Henry says the man replied:

"About half what it was last year."

System

Take it from Hendrik Hudson, Jr., of the Pathfinder, this is how a Scotsman goes to a night club in his own bedroom. He pours himself a drink of water, drinks it and whirls dervish fashion around the room to get dizzy, opens the window so he can hear his neighbor's radio bringing in a jazz band and an incoherent master of ceremonies, kicks himself in the shins, burns a hole in his trousers with a match, musses up his hair, sticks a ten-dollar bill in a drawer marked "Cover Charge" and then goes to bed.

The Morning Mail

"Dear Winchell," writes Millie, "you recently published under 'Things I Never Knew Till Now' that a vote held years ago revealed that the 20 most beautiful words in the language included melody, splendor, adoration, eloquence, virtue, innocence, modesty, faith, joy, honor, nobility, sympathy, heaven, love, divine, hope, harmony, happiness, purity and liberty.

"You might have added the word 'loyalty,' Mr. Winchell!"

Or "Enclosed find check?"

Not New, But Clean

Benny Fields, Blossom Seeley's partner (on and off), offers the one about the big brownskin who was being mustered out of the army when the war ended.

"Where do you come from?" he was asked, "so we can give you your fare back home."

"Eggston, Mississippi," said the sepia.

"There doesn't appear to be any such place on the map," said the officer after he fingered several time tables.

"You had no trouble locating it," was the snapper, "when you drafted me."

A Form of Criticism

A number of newspapers throughout the country actually assigned reporters to Palm Springs, California, to "cover" James J. Walker, the New York mayor.

The Los Angeles Examiner, however, did it in style. That paper apparently lists Jimmy among the country's comedians or actors—for the man it assigned was the dramatic editor.

Mr. Lachman Clicks

Marc Lachman, the press agent for "The New Yorkers" show, accompanied a critic to a new play recently.

The critic dined with George Jean Nathan a few nights after and Nathan remarked:

"Who was that chap sitting with you that night? He has good manners. He wasn't boisterous or first-nighty."

When his critic-friend met Lachman he told him what Nathan said about his good manners.

"What's he doing now?" chirped Lachman. "Reviewing press agents?"

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Drunkard Should Be Cured Of More Than Drink

Likkered lovers—they're no longer a rarity. Time was when young ladies could, and did, chant: "Lips that touch liquor shall never touch mine." Nowadays, it's a strong-minded maid who can be so choosey. Lora would like to be. She detests "the stuff," but alas, "the stuff" has her adored George very firmly in its grip. And Mom 'n' Pop and all the family friends are warning her that she'll wreck her life if she marries a drunkard.

But Lora, like many a love-lorn lass before her, is toying with the idea that "maybe he'll reform if we marry." And she's hoping that we'll urge her along.

Breaks His Promise

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I have a dreadful problem confronting me. What shall I do? I sincerely love George and I know that he loves me. But his work for a large concern brings him into contact with a clique of people who dish out 'the real stuff' (aged in an auto radiator). And he, in turn, seems to be easily tempted and, almost every time he goes up where they are, he gets himself half-soused at least. That happens about two or three times a week.

"I have asked him to stay away from this place but he only 'promises' that he won't partake of any more of this hooch. And he always breaks his promise.

"His father before him was an habitual drunk, which was one of the chief causes of his death a year ago. And my great fear is that George is following his father's footsteps.

"My folks and my friends advise me to steer clear of him, saying that I had better suffer a little heartbreak now, instead of having heartaches and hardships for the rest of my life.

"But they don't seem to realize that George is the biggest ingredient in my happiness, in spite of everything.

A Poor Romeo

"Please help me. What do you think I should do? Should I give him up—or should I hang onto him in spite of his weakness? "LORA."

Well, my dear—you'll have to decide that for yourself. And it's futile for me to tell you that your Romeo sounds like pure poison to me. But I'd certainly advise you to give your own motives a very honest once-over before you stage the big act.

You think you love him. You think it's love because he interests and thrills you — because you think of him all the time—because you find yourself filled with pity and tenderness and despair.

All of which is very exciting—but it's no proof that you're getting a big bang out of trying to play the role of a goddess to a hooch hound. Nothing could possibly be more exciting to your egotism. And the more you're "persecuted" by your unfeeling relations, the more romantic and saintly and martyrized you feel.

Well, youngster, if being a martyr is your idea of a pleasant career, it's jake with me. Only, let me warn you that if you marry your Guzzling Georgia, martyrdom will probably be a 24-hour job, and it will very speedily cease to be a star role. For there isn't one chance out of a million that you will "reform" him.

A drunkard needs to be cured of much more than drink. A man doesn't drink because his father drank before him . . . or because his friends force it on him. He drinks because he is trying to run away from reality and drink is a way out. He drinks because he's a coward . . . because he hasn't enough pride and enough courage to face real life.

Must Face Facts

If he can't accumulate enough pride and courage to stop drinking during these glamorous sweetheart days, you may be sure he won't after you're married. For marriage will be still more of that grim reality which he dreads . . . just one more thing to escape . . . one more reason for grabbing the bottle.

There's the truth about drink, girl. Not so romantic, is it? A drunkard in the grip of a dreadful hereditary vice is quite a dramatic picture . . . but a coward in the grip of his own yellow streak isn't quite so thrilling.

Think it over. Talk it over with the man. Then, if you really want to be honest with him and with yourself, put it up to him. Tell him you'll not beg or scold or coax or tease any more—that you're to let him prove himself, or get out. And then keep your hands off while he does it.

For remember, Lora — you'll wreck more than your own life, if you marry a coward. You'll wreck the lives of the children who will come . . . the children for whose happiness or misery you will be responsible. It may be thrilling to make a martyr of yourself . . . but how about making martyrs of them?

Some Girls Think Nothing of Breaking Up Others' Engagements—Fay King

By FAY KING

Many girls who would not for worlds be guilty of causing unhappiness in a home by snatching another woman's husband, think nothing of breaking an engagement.

They seem to figure that until a man is actually married they have a right to cut the other girl if they can.

It often happens that friends are very much astonished to hear of a young man's marriage to a girl he has recently met, when all along they considered him engaged to a girl he has gone with steadily for some time.

It may be that no real engagement existed, but it was taken for granted by all concerned that the friendship would end in marriage.

One cannot expect happiness when one is unfair.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Faces Another Formidable Problem

At Lillian's comment that whenever she heard Philip Veritzen talking to me she wanted to lay back her ears and bleat I felt even my neck grow crimson, for I had hoped no one else had noticed the effusiveness of my employer's manner whenever he spoke to me. Even her assertion that she thought I not only would be able to win him over to the cause of Noel and Mary, but would also be able to "tame him" so he wouldn't be "everlastingly bothering" me brought me no comfort.

"Of course, the Dicky-bird's reactions are going to be the only problem," she swept on, as if I had not spoken, and I mentally repeated a sardonic "Only!"

"But that can't be helped, and—you never can tell—he may be as docile as a little cherub with wings. Look at the way he's acted tonight. Would anybody ever believe that he could be as swell as all that? I'll bet you've tried some new recipe on him. But you needn't tell me what it was. Just use it again when needed. Police! Look at that clock! I didn't realize we'd been talking so long. And I haven't asked you the other half of what I came in to spill, although primarily I wanted to put you wise about Phil and the Christmas dinner invitation before he sprang something on you unaware. But the other will keep. Come with me before they think the official chaperones have gone back on their job.

She turned abruptly and led the way back to the ballroom. I followed her, feeling much as if I were a puppet with my movements the result of mechanically pulled wires.

Philip Veritzen, a guest at our Christmas dinner, invited into the intimacy of that time! It would be bad enough if there was no other complication, for he was a stranger, and would be the odd one who would have to be considered. But when I considered the persecution to which he had subjected his son and Mary, when I visualized the possible schemes he might even now be concocting against them, with perhaps my home as the place of their fruition, and when I, above all, remembered Dicky's jealousy of my employer, I felt as if this last complication of my Christmas problem was the straw too much upon my laden back.

I slipped into the chair beside Lillian, hoping that no one would ask me to dance. Mr. Veritzen was dancing with Mrs. Brixton and Dicky with Edith. So numbed was I by the news Lillian had given me that even the sight of Edith smiling up into Dicky's eyes did not stir me to resentment. There was no older man free save Charles Owen, and I did not think he would ask me to dance, for I never had attempted to conceal my antipathy to him. But even as I settled back into my chair Noel crossed to me from the stag line and bowed with the almost foreign grace which is his.

I rose and danced with him. "Did you see that—that dance, Mrs. Graham?"

"You mean that wonderful exhibition Mary and young Mr. Cameron were giving?" I asked. "Wasn't it marvelous, and weren't you proud of Mary?"

He was too surprised for speech, but his eyes looked his astonishment. He had expected disapproval, I knew.

"Do you mean that you—that you—" he stammered.

"Approve of Mary's dancing those steps with Mr. Cameron?" I finished. "Why, of course I do. What harm is there in it?"

I felt somewhat as if, in Dicky's parlance, I had "hit him below the belt." But I knew that for Mary's sake, as well as for his own I must give him no hint that my own choler had risen at the sight of that dance, beautiful though it had been.

"I don't suppose there is any harm in it," he said slowly, "but I didn't think Mary would—"

"Look here, Noel," I said—he had guided me into a corner of the room where we were out of earshot of the others—"there are several things you will have to face with Mary." I racked my brain to remember what Dicky had said about his niece. "One is that dancing is the breath of life to her, and the other is that she loves the limelight, as do almost all theatrical people. If you love her you must recognize and accept those two things."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Cold and Carelessness Often Cause Laryngitis

At this time of the year, due to sudden changes in weather, and possibly carelessness on your part, you are likely to have an attack of laryngitis. This is an acute inflammation of the mucous membrane, or the lining of the larynx. It is usually the result of exposure to wet and cold. In many instances, it is simply an extension downward of a cold which started in the head.

Dr. Copeland

It frequently follows the overuse of the voice. It was not uncommon in the late war from the inhalation of irritating gases.

Many individuals have a tendency to inflammation of the larynx. It may be one of the complications in measles, scarlet fever, chicken pox or typhoid fever.

In laryngitis there is a tickling in the throat. Cold air irritates the throat and breathing may be quite difficult. The voice is altered or may be entirely lost. Speaking is generally fatiguing and often very painful.

In adults with this condition, there is no alteration in the breathing. But in children with laryngitis the first sign is usually that of difficulty in breathing. This is due to the inflammation of the throat but often it is so misleading as to be mistaken for croup.

In treating this condition, it is most essential that the larynx be put to rest. There must be no unnecessary talking and, above all, no smoking.

In severe cases it is best to remain in bed. The room should be kept at an even temperature and the air saturated with moisture. This is accomplished by placing a pan of water over the radiator or on the stove.

Inhalations of various prescriptions your doctor will give you are helpful in reducing the difficulty in breathing. For pain, either ice or heat may be applied to the neck. The ice bag usually gives great relief.

The more severe forms of acute laryngitis require careful watching by a physician. But these severe cases are rare.

Answers to Health Queries

C. F. T. Q.—What causes a 6-year-old child to perspire excessively at night?

A. — This may be due to rickets, nervousness, etc. Have the child examined.

L. J. Q.—What causes the ear drums to dry up, leaving me deaf?

A.—This is probably due to a catarrhal condition. It would be wise to see an ear specialist.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

The Gracious Thing to Do

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. A boxer whom I know slightly has invited me to attend, as his guest, one of his important matches. Would it be correct for me to invite him to attend a concert in which I have an important part? I thought it was so kind of him to send me his invitation as I am very fond of boxing.

2. The concert is a month before the boxing. How should I send the invitation and what shall I do about the tickets? I intend to invite one of my girl friends to chat with him between the numbers. I have only met him once and the girl friend, who is willing to entertain him, has never met him.

L.

1. Yes, this would be a gracious thing for you to do.

2. Since you will be busy at the concert I suggest that, with your invitation, you send him the ticket and tell him that next to him will be one of your close friends.

Wearing Gloves at the Dance.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it necessary to wear gloves to a dinner dance?

B. M. R.

Unless the dinner dance is of strict formality.....and very few are, nowadays.....it isn't necessary to wear gloves. But you may, this season, if you wish.

Telephone Conversation.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. In answering a telephone call at your home, what should your first words be?

2. Does this apply to a call at your place of business?

CLARE.

1. Lou say "Hello" . . . the other person says "Hello, Clare? This is Mary" . . . you say, "Hello, Mary, how very nice to hear from you" . . . and then the conversation is on.

2. At your place of business the telephone call should be as brief and to the point as possible. The conversation should not be "on" except for the time it takes for the message to be delivered.

Both Forms Are Correct

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please help me, as I feel embarrassed at times and only lately have ever lived among strangers. When one desires to have something handed to her at the table, just how should the request be worded? I notice that some people say, "Please pass this or that" and others say, "May I have so and so." Please word the form just as it should be used, as I know my every move is watched. C.

Both forms are correct, since both are straightforward requests. But probably the latter one, "May I have the salt, please?" is a bit easier to say.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Throwing weight on one set of muscles, slumping into a chair and sitting on the back of one's neck, walking without energy—all these habits destroy the figure, impair posture and carriage. The backbone is the foundation column of the human body. It should be carried splendidly, the body kept tall and long. Many defects of figure are due to lack of consideration for the well being of the spinal column.

Excessive perspiration is no longer a curse upon one. There are proprietary articles which will overcome the trouble in many cases. If local treatment avails nothing, let the family doc take the matter in hand. The skin is a vast excretory organ. It throws off quantities of poisonous substances which should be bathed away every day with friction to stimulate the functions of pores and glands. A bath brush of firm bristles should be a detail of every woman's toilet equipment.

Greasy scales on the scalp should be treated with vaseline, which appears to loosen them better than other oily preparations. Rub it in with the finger tips, massage the scalp briskly for a few minutes, when going to bed. Next morning have a thorough shampoo, beginning with a hot rinsing with water flowing from a bath spray. Several soapings and innumerable rinsings between the sudsings are necessary for thoroughness.

Something more than a lipstick is necessary to tint the rosebud mouth. Several somethings in fact; a strong light, a good mirror, a steady hand and discretion. A brunette can get away with more make-up than the blonde, whose fair skin offers too strong a contrast to purple eyeshadows, orange-tinted cheeks or carmined lips. The brunette is made vivid by the application of factory blushes, but the blonde all too often looks cheap and garish when she dips too deeply into the color pots.

Tomorrow's Horoscope

Thursday, April 2

While an active and possibly exciting day is the presage based on the lunar transits, with encouragement for new ventures and dealings with large corporations or secret bodies, yet there is danger of loss or friction in employment or in relation with those in places of authority or power. Finances may develop peculiar phases, calling for wise and sagacious manipulation.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a lively and promising year, but employment seems in jeopardy and it would be well to be very discreet in dealing with superiors or those in places of power. New projects should flourish, but finances call for careful manipulation and conservative judgment.

A child born on this day should be enterprising and ambitious, but may succeed better on its own account than in employment. It should attain good position in life, possibly through diplomacy or secret understandings.

Household Hints

A waste-paper basket near the table where groceries are unpacked saves many steps.

Soaking new brooms in a strong solution of salt and hot water, or hot soapsuds, is good; let them dry well before using.

How often have you watched a housewife frantically going through the dresser drawer in search of a spoon or fork while smoke arises from the article being cooked? This would be avoided if the drawer for kitchen cutlery were partitioned and the various utensils sorted and kept in their places.

A can of consomme or bouillon should always be in the house to take place of the stock called for in many recipes.

When windows are hard to raise, pour a little hot lard between the window frame and casing, also on the roller and rope, to remedy the trouble.

For less dust in sweeping, sprinkle the floor or carpet with sawdust, dampened with kerosene; this may be kept and used several times if a little oil is added each time. Or, sprinkle floor with pieces of newspaper wrung out of hot water.

Fayro Makes the Seemingly Impossible Come True

Does it seem impossible to you that you could go back to the girlish figure fashion demands? That you could take off pounds almost at will . . . and immediately, without the torture of starvation diet or exhausting over exercise? Fayro does just that. More than a million and a half packages of Fayro have been purchased on an absolute money back guarantee if you are dissatisfied for any reason, and hundreds of grateful letters testify to its success. We offer you a chance to prove it for yourself without risking a penny. We guarantee to you immediate results, without effort on your part . . . or your money will be refunded without question. Best of all the Fayro treatment is pleasant and absolutely harmless.

Read what Fayro has done for these women

One enthusiastic user of Fayro writes, "Three Fayro Baths reduced my weight 11 pounds in 8 days. I feel better than I have felt for years." "I weigh 16 pounds less and feel younger and sleep better. Fayro is wonderful," writes another. A third says, "Thank you for Fayro. I lost 14 pounds in three weeks; feel better and certainly look better." These are samples of hundreds of letters we have received without any solicitation whatever. *Every letter we have ever published is on file and may be examined by any responsible person.

Fayro is Not a New Product

Fayro has been on sale at the best drug stores in the United States for more than 10 years. Its continuous and growing popularity speaks for its success. But before Fayro was heard of society men and women had been flocking for centuries to hot springs in America and all over the world in search of health. An analysis of the water from these springs reveals the fact that basically the formulae are much alike. All contained various salts, various forms of magnesia, sodium, etc., etc. The formula for Fayro when dissolved in hot water duplicates the most effective chemical elements of these hot spring baths in a form which gives you the opportunity to secure the same or better results in the privacy of your own home . . . without any one even knowing it.

Reduce by "Duct-Activity"

Fayro is a pleasant aromatic powder which you simply pour into your hot bath. Then relax for twenty minutes. In that time you will lose two to four pounds and up. By its peculiar, pleasing action it will stimulate the lazy sweat ducts to activity. Surplus fats and body poisons will be thrown off. You will literally "feel" the fat disappear, without rubbing or exercise, just by sitting in your tub, and you will step out refreshed, spirited, buoyant. Your skin will be clearer, smoother and healthier. Your friends will notice the difference, but will not know, unless you choose to tell, how it was done. Do not confuse Fayro with any internal medicine or any so-called reducing treatment. Fayro is unique. Try it tonight at our risk. Remember your money will be refunded if you are dissatisfied for any reason.

BRILLIANT NIGHT IN RADIO THEATER

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

April has an auspicious opening night on the radio . . . No foolin' . . . Richard Dix and other movie stars . . . the Boswells . . . John Held, Jr. . . . Frances Alda . . . Tampa with his specially organized Schnitzelbunk Chorus and lots of steamboat sound effects . . . the return of "Arabesque" . . . the KDKA Troubadour group in their anniversary program . . . and to our mind, most important of all, a tabloid production of "The Mikado." Tandy MacKenzie as "Nanki Poo" and Reinald Werrenrath as the "Mikado" head the Gilbert and Sullivan cast on KDKA at 9:30.

Richard Dix

Alexander Kurochkin — deepest bass profundo in the world —will have his arm in a sling when he sings with the Kremlin Quintet via WJZ at 11:30 tonight. He was badly mussed up recently when his automobile collided with a street car.

Kurochkin has been known to sing F below C, an interval of a sixth from the extreme left-hand end of any standard piano keyboard.

QUESTION A DAY:

Where is station W8XS?—V. K., Blairsville.

Answer—That's a special experimental station of KDKA used frequently in special tests. It operates on eight different wavelengths. Power ranges from 2,000 to 20,000 watts.

Ben Bernie hits so many golf balls into the woods that Richy Craig, Jr., suggests that he carry a rifle in his bag so that he can go hunting at the same time.

These two wits put more in their 15 minutes via WJAS last night than most sponsors put in an hour. Yes, we "liked it" and hope for more of Ben Bernie via WJAS on those Columbia broadcasts from Chicago. Why not, Mr. Brennan?

* * *

Six sponsors are bidding for the services of Kate Smith, NBC "Songbird of the South." Kate has a wistful sense of humor, to-wit—"a woman isn't so foolish after all, for she may spend $25 for a 75-cent hat, but she doesn't pay a quarter every night to get it back."

STUDIO LIGHTS

Ted Lewis gets $2,500 a broadcast . . . Doc Whipple's real name is Clark Whipple . . . Jesse Crawford (WTIC at 9) played the piano in a Spokane (Wash.) movie house for $5 a week when he was smaller than that . . . his arrangement of "Light Cavalry Overture" Sunday night on the air was brilliant beyond adjectives . . . a "Miniature Minstrel Show" is booked by Olive Palmer and other stars tonight...opportunity still knocks twice on that KDKA program at 9 this eve . . . we had the pleasure of visiting the radio room in the "Los Angeles," the ship that passed over Pittsburgh yesterday . . . the transmitter is generated by storage batteries that are charged by the whirring of propellers . . . only short wave communication is used . . . a wire coil like that in your hot water heater serves as an aerial counterpoise . . . it is weighted at the bottom and is dropped overboard when signals are to be transmitted or received...Renee Chemet, famous French violinist, plays on WCAE Sunday, April 19.

H. Warden Wilson, the boy who tricks 'em all with his impersonations of Seth Parker, Rudy Vallee, etc., is the mainspring in a bit of April foolishness on WJZ, WJR, WLS at 9 tonight.

The LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, April 1.—The broadcasting of the Grand National proved anew to American ears how superior our radio description of sports events are to those of England.

For all the excitement it conveyed the radio story might just as well have been a report of a coal-mining survey in Wales. Listeners, expecting to abandon their chores during the broadcast, found themselves returning to their labors after one brief minute of British calm. Indeed, the broadcast was the very apotheosis of British calm.

I wonder if listeners in Great Britain are satisfied with the radio descriptions of their outstanding sports events. Considering the appeal in British of the tensely and tersely-written tabloids, of peppy musical shows, of American jazz, it is difficult to believe English ear-cuppers are content with the stodgy type of sports description which seems to be the vogue abroad.

I have a notion they would have enjoyed the running comment of Clem McCarthy had he been permitted to give it, would have responded to him with many a "hear, hear" and "Oh, I say."

The Grand National, like the Derby last June, must have teemed with excitement. The background of the race is almost as glowing as that of the classic at Epsom Downs. Moreover, it had a special appeal to Americans by virtue of the presence of three American horses. Alas, it was the dullest of all sports broadcasts yet aired. Even the ping-pong tournament in New York was a hectic heartbeat in comparison.

But Britain's broadcasters stuck doggedly to their policy of colorless accuracy. There would be no errors on the parts of the commentators but there also would be no thrills. When it comes to radio, England would rather be right than thrilling. Her announcers are chosen for their knowledge of the particular sports events to be broadcast. But for the life of us we cannot understand why so much stress is laid on expert knowledge and so little on the ability to tell a story interestingly. Certainly, such a viewpoint is not held in British literature or British politics. Why it should hold in the broadcasting of British sports is something possibly that only Shaw can explain.

For American ears at least, the king's horses are at present to be preferred to the king's men.

Meanwhile, American broadcasters are making ready for the opening baseball games—games that the mahatmas of the diamond are willing to toss into the radio hopper without fear of consequences at the turnstiles. The mahatmas, it seems to me, have good reason to reject the pleas of the broadcasters save in the case of the opening games and those of the world series, for baseball is one game that the radio men have been able to make as interesting to the occupant of the armchair as to those who sit in actual attendance.

The archdukes of the air have finally assigned Beatrice Herford, next to Ruth Draper, the most successful impersonator of American folkdom. As yet they have not succeeded in winning Miss Draper herself. Nor have they shoved their dotted lines in front of the Six Brown Brothers, still the most able saxophone ensemble in the public.

ROCK'S CAREER COLORFUL

Sport Comment

By JAMES J. LONG

Rockne's Tragic End. • Hoppe Rated at Top.
Greatest Coach Passes. Floor Cage Returning.

FOOTBALL LOSES MIGHTIEST FIGURE

ALREADY SADDENED BY the almost simultaneous passing of two great baseball leaders in Ban Johnson and Ernest S. Barnard, the sport world has been plunged into even deeper sorrow by the shocking death of Knute Rockne. Never in all its history has it received a more staggering blow than that which left it stunned and grief-stricken when Notre Dame's wizard gridiron coach, the most towering figure in modern football, was killed yesterday in the crash of a passenger and air mail plane near Bazar, Kan.

Knute Rockne

A career without a parallel in football was brought to a tragic and shockingly sudden ending when the colorful life that had been intimately associated with packed stadia and roaring crowds was snuffed out like a candle in the solitude of a Kansas pasture field. There has passed not only the greatest and most successful coach the gridiron game ever knew, and the main prop of Notre Dame's championship dynasty, but the mightiest single influence that ever dominated any branch of sport.

COMING TO THIS country from Norway as a child, Rockne was football's man of destiny. He did more than any other individual to revolutionize a game that is one of America's biggest institutions. From 1912 to 1914, inclusive, he was a star end in his playing days at Notre Dame, making Walter Camp's third all-America team in 1913, and even in those early years he started with Gus Dorais the development of the forward pass into a play of greater possibilities than other football men of that period believed it could hold.

His record for 13 years of coaching at the South Bend school stands without an equal. In all that time his teams lost only 12 games, an average of less than one to a season, while winning 105 and tying five, a victory percentage of .897. In five seasons they were undefeated, including the last two, in which the Irish won 19 games in succession and swept all opposition before them from coast to coast.

THE STAR PLAYERS Rockne developed attested his right to the ranking of the greatest football teacher in the country. From raw material he brought out luminaries by the dozen from the mighty George Gipp, his best individual player, down through the immortal Four Horsemen and Walsh, Mohardt, Kiley, Castner, Krown, Boeringer, Smith and others to the Cannons, Carideos, Schwartzes, Brills, Savoldis, Metzgers, Yarrs and others of his last powerful machines. More of his players have become coaches than are credited to any other mentor.

Rockne made the name of Notre Dame stand for the highest football standards in the country, and made the teams of that institution the strongest drawing cards in the game. In Pittsburgh, where his death is mourned as deeply as in any other city, his teams drew the only capacity crowds (two) that have yet packed the huge Stadium.

ROCKNE WAS MORE than a football tutor. He was a leader, a master of psychology, a source of inspiration, and on top of it all a man and a sportsman who exerted a splendid influence over his players, made his own life and habits an example for them and who was at all times building characters as well as football teams. It hurts the game more than the loss of any other one man could have hurt it. There can be no filling his place. Notre Dame will go on, and so will football, but neither will be quite the same. And to every saddened individual fan comes the feeling that something has gone out of his or her life.

IN REPEATING DURING his Pittsburgh stay this week his offer to meet any three-cushion billiardist in the world for $5,000 a side, Champion Arthur Thurnblad preferred, Willie Hoppe had the support of many cue veterans.

Joe Ferguson, eastern referee, pronounces Hoppe the greatest three-cushion expert of all time. "The interest that exists today in three-cushions was created by Hoppe," he said. "Until Willie started to play it a few years ago the game was known as one for disappointed balk-line players. He made it what it is at present."

Willie Hoppe

FERGUSON POINTS OUT that, where balk-line requires patience and skill, an element of luck is attached to three-cushions. There are many ways of playing three-cushion shots, he explains, and there are always plenty of shots open to the player, which has done much to popularize the game.

Just the opposite situation prevails in balk-line, wherein a player often must wait for more than half an hour before an opportunity presents itself.

"Hoppe combines his balk-line knowledge with three-cushions and pocket billiards, and, in fact, all styles of billiards," Ferguson continued. "Most of the three-cushion players have their own systems, concentrating on one ball. Hoppe plays all three balls. The rest rely on some system of their own. But Hoppe, in addition to having his own style of play, combines the systems of Layton, Reiselt and the other experts. Balk-line supplies Hoppe with many three-cushion shots which the others do not have. So, in all, the general ability of Hoppe to call on this great store of billiard requisites puts him far in front of the three-cushion field."

CAGE BASKETBALL IS coming back. Many old fans in these parts have often wondered why it ever was allowed to pass out and thus slow up the game, for when basketball is played in a cage it means that there can be no out-of-bounds balls and no time out, thus assuring constant action of the fastest kind.

When cages were used in the old Central League hereabouts the fans were treated to basketball of the highest quality, and veteran game-goers have never found the same appeal in the modern sport. But recently cages have been used in some parts of the East, and now the style is coming west again.

CLEVELAND GAVE IT a tryout in a couple of games between a picked team of former Rosenblum stars and the Renaissance Club, of New York, champion Negro five. The fast action made a hit and promoters who watched the test announced their intention of forming a new league next winter to play behind the screens.

And Pittsburgh is to have it, too. John J. Freund, Jr., is convinced the cage game would go over big here if brought back, and says he intends to give it a whirl when next season arrives.

Phil Collins

won 16 of the Quakers' 52 victories last season against 11 defeats.

WITH THE SURRENDER of Dazzy Vance, the holdout list in the major baseball league is further reduced. Remy Kremer, Pirate pitcher, is still among the unsigned, it develops, along with Chuck Klein, Chick Hafey, Phil Collins and Lu Blue. One holdout that may lead to a deal, according to latest reports, is that of Phil Collins, Philly right-hand pitcher. Manager Burt Shotton is said to have become displeased at the attitude of Collins and expresses a willingness to consider a swap for him. Collins

NATIONAL LEAGUE

LAST NIGHT'S RESULT

Chicago	1—N. Y. Rangers 0

By CARL W. SHATTO

The Yellow Jackets' last vestige of hope of winning the International Hockey League championship (a very forlorn hope at the start of the fray) was shattered and washed away as the locals' attack, which swept up the ice in wave after wave, broke ineffectively on the Cleveland Indians' rock-ribbed defense at Duquesne Garden last night.

The deluge which extinguished the Jackets' last spark of hope came in the form of a 3-1 Cleveland victory, and it fell during a violent storm—a storm of wild action that kept a capacity crowd of die-hard fans up and cheering throughout the three periods.

Until last night the Schooley stalwarts had one of those "mathematical chances" of lifting the crown now being defended by the Indians. Today they are without such comfort as a mathematical chance provides, for last night's setback was the fourth straight which they have sustained in this title series in which each contender—Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Windsor and Buffalo—plays six games.

President-Manager Roy D. Schooley introduced several lineup changes, the first of which was to assign starting front line duties to Mickey McGuire, Tex White and Cam Proudlock. The new starting trio made Schooley's strategy look good by producing a goal after 52 seconds of play. When a shot which Proudlock gained from the opening face-off missed the Cleveland cage, McGuire rushed in and wrested the puck from a surprised Tribesman who was nursing the disc along the end boards. His well-directed pass ended at the point of the stick which White held in readiness at the mouth of the Indians' goal, and Tex promptly backhanded the puck past Goalie Gordon Baxter and into the net.

INDIANS GAIN LEAD

The cheering for the McGuire-White scoring act hardly had died down when Proudlock was banished, and Cam no sooner had reached the penalty box than King Williams beat Cox with a shot started at the points of the local goalie's skates. Albie had no chance to save, and he was very busy making one sensational stop after another when with Gregg also banished and the visitors two men up on the locals, Arthur Clark wifted the disc over his prostrate form. The first Cleveland goal was recorded at 5:20 and the second at 7:06.

Late in the period, after the Jackets were at full strength again, Proudlock converted a pass from McGuire into what appeared to be the deadlocking goal, but Referee Tommy Hughitt ruled that Cam had upset Goalie Baxter in sweeping the disc into the cage, and refused to allow the tally.

About a minute before the first-period gong a possible error of judgment by McGuire cost Pittsburgh another goal. Proudlock drove a hot shot into Goalie Baxter's pads when Mickey was standing shoulder to shoulder with the Cleveland goalie. The disc dropped dead on the goal line, and McGuire, thinking that it was in and that a goal had been scored, made no effort to push it to the back of the cage. The goal judge and the referees decided that Mickey's judgment was in error, and again what appeared to be a tally turned out to be nothing more than target practice.

YOUNG BAGS GOAL

McGuire and Gray, Cleveland center, both were in the cooler when Doug Young rammed home the visitors' third goal, after 11 minutes of torrid action in the second period. His shot was started from a very difficult angle—such an angle that when the puck hit Cox's chest it skidded right on into the side of the net.

The lineup:

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: MARCO POLO—THE WHITE GOD OF THE CHINESE—Marco Polo, Venetian traveler, who visited China in the thirteenth century, was the recipient of great honors conferred upon him by Kublai Khan, the ruler of China, and held high offices under that ruler. For many centuries Polo's accounts of his travels comprised all of the knowledge Europe possessed of the Far East. The great geographical discoveries of Portugal and of Columbus were greatly influenced by them. Polo's fame survives among the Chinese to this day. His figure is one of the 500 "Arhans" (Buddhist divinities) in the temple of Canton. On the occasion of the Geographical Congress, in Venice, in 1881, the Venetian municipality requested and obtained a copy of this statue for erection within the confines of the city. THE MONKEY'S TOY—The monkey's toy is a nutlike kernel picked up and played with through life by monkeys in the Yunan Valley in old China. HOPPE, COCHRAN AT HOMESTEAD

Willie Hoppe and Welker Cochran, billiard stars, the latter the world 18.1 and 18.2 balkline champion, who have been appearing in exhibitions at local parlors the last two days, move the scene of their operations to Homestead today, appearing in the Carnegie Library Club there at 3 and 8 p. m.

The pair played at the Ellis parlors, downtown, again yesterday afternoon and evening, and at the Kenyon parlors, North Side, later in the evening.

The cue masters split their balkline matches yesterday, Hoppe bowing to Cochran, 200 to 75, in the afternoon event, and winning at night, 200 to 104. Both three-cushion exhibitions went the way of the former champion of champions, Willie copping in the afternoon, 25 to 23, in 20 innings, and in the evening, 25 to 23, in 23 innings.

Hoppe had the high run of the day in the balkline competition, stepping off in the evening match with a run of 199, and winding up the match easily in his next inning. Cochran stepped out with 100. Welker held the upper hand in the afternoon tilt, running 114 in the third inning before he missed. Yesterday's scores:

Afternoon play—
Cochran	45	0	114	41—200
Hoppe	3	20	52	*— 75

JUNIOR BODY MEETS FRIDAY

By TOM BIRKS

The committee for the new spring soccer competition has given junior clubs of the district until Friday evening to enter the tourney. Last evening, the committee, composed of Parks, Federoff, Luxbacher, Rehman, and Smith, held a meeting in Dutch Hall, Bridgeville. Five clubs appeared, and all were willing to attend Friday's meeting at the same place.

The Keystone League meeting, held in the office of President Hillen, at Heidelberg, resulted in a decision that sends Morgan to Dunlevy a week from Sunday.

The taking of a Morgan forfeit and the points would not recompense Dunlevy for its loss of gate receipts.

Next Sunday, Morgan will meet Shannon Fintex at Shannon, and Cecil will travel to Dunlevy. On the following Sunday, Morgan goes to Dunlevy, and Shannon meets Bridgeville at Bridgeville.

Sport Vignettes

Flashbacks on the sudden, shocking death of Knute Rockne, Notre Dame's wonder football coach: . . . Early afternoon of a quiet spring day . . . Not much doing in the newspaper office . . . A bell signal taps . . . That means a bulletin of great importance has been received by the Associated Press . . . A copy boy rushes after it, to return breathless in a few moments, panting: "Rockne's dead!" and hurry on to the news desk . . . Faces blanch and ears refuse to believe, then a scurrying of feet in the wake of the messenger of death . . . The bulletin is not definite . . . Confirmation of Rockne's identity is lacking . . . Later it comes . . . Meanwhile extras are rushed to press, frantic calls from the outside snarl the telephone service . . . "Is it true—about Rockne?" they ask, and run the gamut of human emotions when told that it is.

Rewrite men put in calls for the local men who knew Rockne—Elmer Layden, Joe Bach, Buddy Overend, Don Harrison, Judge John Egan, Jock Sutherland, Father Cox and others—and shock these people almost out of their shoes with the tragic news . . . What have they to say, what do they think? . . . They gulp and swallow and stammer . . . A few don't believe it; surely they're being kidded about a serious matter . . . One instinctively swears a streak to think that his friend, Rockne, has been carried off at the peak of his career, flicked out like a candle-light in the twinkling of an eye . . . And, where he utters oaths, another cannot speak for the tears that come and the choking sensation . . . Women call up, and children.

Up at Duquesne University, Layden and Bach are so crushed that they call it quits on the football practice about to begin and sit about repeating "'Rock,' 'Rock,' gone! It can't be!" . . . A little later, more composed, Layden, one of the Four Horsemen under Rockne at Notre Dame, speaks in a more resigned tone . . . "South Bend won't be big enough to hold all of the folks who will want to get a last look at 'Rock,'" he says, and there is affection in that word "Rock." . . . The last eleven Rockne ever coached was the aggregation of former Notre Dame stars that performed against a professional team in a benefit game for the unemployed in New York several months ago, and they had all of the Four Horsemen together again on that occasion.

Already there is talk of a memorial for Rockne . . . It is suggested that the new stadium at South Bend be called the Rockne Memorial Stadium, or that a suitable memorial be erected within it . . . In a few hours, there is speculation already as to the successor of the wizard coach, while yet his body lies not fully identified . . . It is the way of the fast-moving world . . . Everywhere there is a hushed, muffled note as the tragedy of it all is discussed . . . A great man has passed on . . . The coach of coaches, who rose from obscurity to the position of the outstanding genius of the gridiron sport . . . The deaths of E. S. Barnard and Ban Johnson, the American League's only full-fledged presidents in the 30 years of its existence, within 16 hours, a few days ago, causing a stir, is speedily relegated to the limbo of forgotten things by the lightning strike that has carried off a beloved national hero.—HARRY KECK.

ROCK'S DEATH SADDENS BUGS

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT.

LOS ANGELES, April 1.—Members of the Pirate family who knew Knute Rockne were among the countless thousands saddened by his sudden death.

Dr. William L. Marks, of Carnegie Tech, who is the club physician for the Pittsburgh team, had known Rockne for many years.

"The death of Knute Rockne is a big shock to all of us in football. I think it is the worst blow the grid game ever received," was the statement of the Carnegie Tech official.

John Holohan, graduate manager of Duquesne University and now the business manager of the Pirates, also was a friend of the Notre Dame mentor.

"Rockne was the symbol of football in the United States," declared Holohan. "He was a great man in other walks of life, but I don't see how he can be replaced in football."

One of Rockne's best friends on the Coast was Leo J. (Hap) O'Connor, of this city, who was with the Pirates when the bad news of the football coach was received. O'Connor felt the death keenly, he having entertained Rockne and many of his players when they were here for the big game with Southern California.

OAKMONT LINKS STAR WINS

PINEHURST, N. C., April 1.—(AP.)—Maureen Orcutt, Englewood, N. J., medalist, easily won her way into the second round of match play in the North and South women's tournament here yesterday, downing Ruth Batchelder, Boston, 7 and 6.

Mrs. S. F. Wadsforth, of Oakmont, pulled a surprise by trimming Martha Parker, New York, Metropolitan champion, 1 up.

Jane Brooks, Nyack, N. Y., upset Edith Quier, of Reading, Pa., last year's runner-up, 3 and 2.

WONDER COACH FINDS PEACE AT LAST

By JESS CARVER

The gates of Valhalla have swung wide, and into the haven of all great heroes has swept the dominant figure of the Great Dane of football. Knute Rockne has found the rest and quiet that his own personality and vital being denied him on this earth.

Hurtled out of the air, his body, that only a few seconds before had been alive and warm and feverish with the spirit that carried him to the very top, crushed and broken, still and cold, Knute Rockne, greatest of football coaches, a scholar, a gentleman, a father, faithful husband and a true sportsman, yesterday was gathered up and prepared for the sad journey back to the home and town that worshiped and adored him, as a man and a national figure.

WELL-LIKED HERE

Pittsburgh knew Rockne, knew him well. He played here as an undergraduate for the institution he made famous as a coach. For eight years he met teams from the city, and almost as often, he paid the city visits for the purpose of speaking before luncheon clubs, business gatherings and alumni bodies.

Rockne played on the Notre Dame elevens of 1912, 1913, 1914. He was right end here in 1912, when Razz Quailey, later Dr. C. B. Quailey, and over the final chalkmark a year ahead of Rock, was quarterback for Pitt. That year, Gus Dorais, the Irish quarterback, booted a field goal that brought Notre Dame a 3-0 victory.

After being graduated from Notre Dame, Rockne became assistant coach to Jesse Harper, an instructor in chemistry. As a teacher, he rated A-1. It is told of him that he flunked seven out of nine members of one class. He demanded perfection.

At the close of the 1917 season, Harper decided to leave South Bend and the choice of a successor lay between Rockne and Dorais, close friends and roommates while students.

WON ON TOSS OF COIN

Neither man would take the job ahead of the other, and finally, so legend hath it, a coin was tossed. Rockne won the toss, became head coach at Notre Dame, and Dorais went to Detroit University.

Almost immediately upon taking over the reins as head coach, Rockne set to working out the plans that had been conceived in his fine brain, which already was working overtime. He dreamed of the time when Notre Dame would ride the crest, far ahead of all rivals, queen of the gridiron seas and champion of the nation.

What was the result? The only result possible when a man of the tireless, dynamic and forceful energy of a Rockne sets his heart and soul to a task. Teams such as Army, Princeton, Navy, leaders of the Big Ten, Carnegie Tech, Penn, Penn State and, later, Pitt, were scheduled. On the West Coast, Stanford and Southern California were gathered into the fold.

DEVELOPED GREAT STARS

Players such as Gipp, Walsh, Boeringer, Miller, Enright, Weibel, the Four Horsemen, Wynne, Kizer and, of recent years, Carideo, Schwartz, Savoldi, Elder, Jack Cannon, Ted Twomey, Jack Chevigny, Metzger, O'Connor, Mullin, Brill, Conley and Moynihan were developed. These men made great teams, fighting teams, wonder teams, teams that never quit, that fought through against all odds, teams that made the great song of Notre Dame almost a national anthem, part of which shouts to the heavens:

"What though the odds be great or small,
Old Notre Dame will win over all."

In the 10 years he was at Notre Dame, Rockne's teams won 105 games, lost only 12 and were tied five times. During those years

BILOXI, Miss., April 1.—Well, the big leagues didn't have to stagger along very far without another Art Shires. I see the Cards have got one of those "what-a-man" in Dizzy Dean. Just listen to him gab for two minutes, and you know he never got sunburned by any violet rays.

By talking in his sleep, Dizzy convinced himself he would be an even swap for Lefty Grove, Henry Ford and Amos and Andy.

Last year on our club, Shires thought he was the best first baseman in baseball. He is now with Milwaukee telling 'em we had to shoo him out of Washington to give Hoover an even break in getting cheered.

RODGERS, DATTO GROSS $20,000 IN BATTLES

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

The Jackie Rodgers - Johnny Datto bust at Motor Square Garden last Monday night drew the largest gate receipts of the season in the East End arena, and only the fact that upwards of 1,000 other fans had to be turned away because of the ban on standing room prevented the gross from hitting around the $10,000 mark at prices of $1, $2 and $3. The gross receipts were $7,486, with a net, after the state tax was deducted, of $7,121.80, of which Datto received 30 per cent and Rodgers 25 per cent. Meaning that Datto pulled down $2,136.24, while Rodgers received $1,780.20.

Who said anything about depression?

As a spectacle, the fight was worth about 20 cents per contestant.

DRAW BIG PURSES

The second Rodgers-Datto bout, staged on February 9, drew the second best gate of the season, $7,120 gross, while their first meeting, on New Year's Night, grossed around $5,200, which means that in three fights this pair has attracted in the vicinity of $20,000, of which more than 50 per cent has been paid to them in purses. All chance of further meetings between the pair was killed when they waltzed through their half-hearted third clash, which saw the fans protesting in no uncertain fashion and the referee calling in vain on the principals to extend themselves a bit. Action may be taken by the Boxing Commission to punish both men for their poor work.

Promoter John L. Hernon, of Motor Square Garden, today denied a report that the Garden was planning to put back Rodgers and Datto for a "restitution" bout at a top price of $1.

CHAMPION NEXT CARD

As against the drawing powers of the three Rodgers-Datto battles, the Benny Touchstone-Joe Sekyra heavyweight battle in the same arena last week attracted only $2,500 worth of business.

Needless to say, the Garden is looking for another big crowd next Monday night, when it presents Maxie Rosenbloom, the world light-heavyweight champion, and Billy Jones, Negro former Pittsburgher, now of Philadelphia, in a nontitle windup. The colorful Rosenbloom always has been a good card here and he has not shown in Pittsburgh since he has been a champion.

VAN RYN, SUTTER WIN

NEW ORLEANS, April 1.—(AP.)—John Van Ryn, of Philadelphia, Wimbledon doubles champion, today won his quarter-finals match with Jack Mooney, Atlanta, in the New Orleans Country Club invitation tennis tournament, 6-0, 6-2. Cliff Sutter, New Orleans, easily put out Jake Hess, Rice Institute, Houston, Tex., 6-1, 6-3, in a third-round match.

NO. 2—HOW TO CATCH.

By "Mickey" Cochrane

WORLD CHAMPION CATCHER.

There have been so many great catchers and so many catching styles that it's a bit hard to tell a youngster just which style to follow. No two catchers work alike. Johnny Kling, Roger Bresnahan, Billy Sullivan, Gabby Street, Jimmy Archer, Ray Schalk—all of them were good and all different. For instance, Bresnahan always believed that a curve ball was a pitcher's best weapon. Street thought a fast ball was the ace in the hole—and he would rather work with Walter Johnson than any other pitcher because he had a lot of faith in that fast ball.

In this picture, I've tried to show this boy the catcher's stance. There are two or three things about the picture to look out for. First of all, give the pitcher a perfect target with the glove. Next, see that both feet are set firmly on the ground, hand extended, and the catcher is in position to take the shock of the pitch, come in with the ball and not be swept off balance. Notice also that, while the feet are wide spread, the right foot is slightly in advance of the left and the catcher is in position to shift and move quickly in any direction. He can go back for a foul, race forward for a bunt, dive into the dirt or go into the air for wild pitches, or be set for a quick throw as the occasion demands.

The biggest job a catcher has is in handling the pitcher There's no set rule for that. Every pitcher works differently, and it's up to the catcher to study each pitcher and use the stuff that the pitcher can do best. There's no hard and fast rule for a fast or a curved ball. But there is one general rule. It's this: When you know a hitter is going to swing, make him cut at the best the pitcher has. If he's a curve ball pitcher, make it a curve. If he's a fast ball pitcher, make it a fast ball.

Bob Grove is a fast ball pitcher—so when I'm catching Bob I use that curve only as a come-on, and keep it either inside or outside, but never through the middle. With Jack Quinn, I worked the other day. Jack's spitter was his best shot and his fast ball I used only as a threat.

One other thing about catching. Don't have too many signals. They're confusing. One signal for a fast one, one for a curve and one for a waste pitch are about all you need—these and a good, sharp pair of eyes to watch everything that's going on out there on the field will get you by.

MILK FUND DROPS BOUT

CHICAGO, April 1.—(AP.)—Chicago as the site for the world heavyweight championship fight between Max Schmeling and Young Stribling, appeared to be slipping today in favor of Cleveland.

William E. Carey, president of Madison Square Garden Corporation, and Joe Jacobs, manager of the German titleholder, were in Cleveland today to investigate the situation there, after encountering "certain difficulties" in connection with their plans to stage the fight in Chicago. They had been in conference here with Sheldon Clark, wealthy Chicago sportsman, and George Getz, member of the Illinois State Athletic Commission, but so many complications presented themselves that they decided to consider Cleveland's offer for the fight before reaching a decision.

The New York Milk Fund, which had been sponsoring the proposed bout, yesterday abandoned all further interest in it.

LOCAL PINMEN HIT IN CASH

BUFFALO, April 1.—Pittsburgh claimed a little more of the American Bowling Congress prize money here yesterday, when one pair hit well in the doubles and two individuals counted up in the singles. Braddock will draw a small piece of the change for the 594 singles of J. Sundahl.

L. Torreyson and J. Eulert teamed it for 1171 in the doubles, this being one of the best counts of the day. Eulert came back in the singles with a pay count of 602, and H. Beck produced a 612. The scores:

Braddock, J. Read and J. Sundahl, 1056; Pittsburgh, L. Torreyson and J. Eulert, 1171; H. Back and Z. Perry, 1111.

LOS ANGELES, April 1.—The Pirate-Cub contest of this afternoon brings to a close the seven-game California series of the two fascinating National League clubs. At the completion of the battle, the Freebooters will double back to San Francisco, where they will disport themselves for four days before heading eastward.

The hero of the Pittsburgh camp today is Catcher Eddie Phillips. Scarcely recovered from an ugly foot wound, the former Boston College grid star was the inspiration for a 9-to-5 defeat of the Bruins yesterday afternoon. It was the first Pittsburgh victory over Chicago in six conflicts, and it was Phillips' bat that clinched the argument.

Eddie came out of the scrap with two long homers, his drives accounting for four tallies. His second round-tripper was a part of the five-run offensive staged by the Buccos in the eighth. Phillips put the Buccos in the thick of the fight in the fourth when he bounced a homer off the centerfield fence with one on, and a bunkmate also was aboard in the eighth when he drove another long one over the leftfield wall. He caught the whole game and, in a general way, starred. The new catcher is loaded with ginger.

So the tone of the Buccos was more hopeful today and things are looking up. Paul Waner played a part of the game, his ailing leg being close to recovery, according to the club medicos.

The return of Brother Paul to the lineup also saw a change in the Pirate battle front, Tommy Thevenow dropping to the seventh position. The shortstop came through with a hot three-bagger in the eighth that gave the Pirates a brace of tallies.

Gus Suhr also was a batting star of the game, Gus making the welkin ring with a homer, a triple and a single.

The pitching of Remy Kremer and Charley Wood was in keeping with the fine offensive play of the Pittsburgh team.

Altoona Pat Malone did all of the chucking for the Cubs, but Pat found the journey a tough one. Danny Taylor batted for Pat in the ninth and started some trouble by drawing a walk. Hack Wilson was up in the round with the bases jammed and only one out, but Wood made him force a teammate.

PRIMO CARNERA FINED

ROME, April 1.—(AP.)—Primo Carnera today was fined 5,000 lire ($260) for failure to obtain permission of the Italian Boxing Federation to fight Jim Maloney in Miami last month. Carnera, who already owes the Federation a similar sum, also was suspended for failure to pay $1,000 to a Florence promoter as a forfeit for his failure to appear in a scheduled match in that city.

SCHOOL SWIM FINALS ON TODAY

The Pittsburgh scholastic swimming championships for both senior and junior high schools will be decided this afternoon in the pool of the Connelley Trade School, where the semi-finals were held on Monday. The survivors of the series of eliminations held during the past week will compete.

In the diving championship finals, held in the same pool yesterday, South Hills High copped the honors, Grant and Thumpton of that school grabbing first and second places, respectively. Grant aggregated 177 7-10 points and Thumpton, 161 6-10.

An Oliver High entrant, Faust, ranked third, with 159 6-10, and McQuillen, of Schenley, fourth, with 157 3-10.

Titulia, of Westinghouse, captured high point total in the junior competition, he aggregating 108 4-10. Amicone, of Allegheny, was second, 98 2-10; Page, of Fifth Avenue, third, with 89 6-10, and Eisner, of Baxter, fourth, 87 6-10.

The judges were J. T. Taylor, E. J. White, and C. Lawrence Walsh.

The Spirit Lives

By JEAN BOSQUET

The tolling bells of sticken Notre Dame
Give ringing voice to requiem profound,
And penned in gold, a new immortal name
Within Valhalla's corridors is found.

Let ring the bells, and bow each rev'rent head
Where chivalry and honor count for most—
The Rock, the old Rock, loved by all, is dead,
And silence grips an unbelieving host.

The Rock against which thund'rous waves were spent
In vain onslaught that died in futile spray,
Is vanished from the Irish battlement,
Where once it turned the conflict's tide away.

The stalwart band that scaled the crested height,
Fair victors on the throng-encircled field,
Were nurtured by their Viking chieftain's might,
And like their Rock knew naught of how to yield.

Gird well the raiders for the battle's shock,
Without the guidance of the master hand—
Take up the gauntlet of the mighty Rock,
Who watches from Valhalla's distant land.

Play hard the game he loved, but clean and fair,
As he would play who filled his destiny;
His place upon the vacant bench is there—
High hold the fallen master's memory!

Notre Dame Spirit Crushed by Tragedy

SOUTH BEND, Ind., April 1.—(AP.)—The "Spirit of Notre Dame," a fighting spirit that never before tottered, was crushed today by tragedy.

Knute Kenneth Rockne, the man who did more in building up that far-flung spirit than anyone else, was dead and the blow of his sudden, tragic loss stunned everybody. It was as devastating as it was sudden to Notre Dame and it seemed like the rude interruption to just a wonderful dream.

University leaders, students, townspeople of South Bend and even the smallest boys on the streets were grief-stricken as they realized that their "Rock" had marched on. A pall was cast across the shadows of his achievement, flags flew sadly at half-mast and everyone who knew him personally or just by name hung their heads in sorrow.

FRIENDS STRICKEN

So amazed and stricken were his friends that even today, almost 24 hours after the immortal football coach's tragic death in an airplane crash in Kansas, funeral arrangements were far from complete. All that was fairly certain was that when the remains of that restless man, whose teams made football history, are lowered into the grave thousands will be present.

Pending word from his widow, rushing back home from Miami, Fla., definite arrangements will be held in abeyance. Mrs. Rockne was expected to arrive in South Bend tomorrow night, several hours after the arrival of the body. Most of her friends and university officials said today they believed the funeral services would be held Saturday morning.

"I want him buried from the Church of Notre Dame amid the surroundings and boys he loved so well," was all Mrs. Rockne would say.

As preparations were completed to say a solemn requiem mass for Notre Dame's immortal football leader today in the Sacred Heart Church on the campus, messages of condolence literally poured into the Rockne home and to the university.

They came from all corners of the world and from everyone who had known "Rock," as he was known intimately to thousands. Telegraph and telephone offices worked overtime to care for the messages, which only served to accentuate the importance of his passing.

CARIDEO STUNNED

It was among the members of "Rockne's boys," the football players who knew and loved him, that the crushed spirit was the most noticeable. All of them were as heartbroken today as they were joyous last fall when they crushed Southern California to stretch their string of unbroken victories to 19 straight. But to a man they mourned not so much the loss of a great football coach as the loss of a man.

"This thing has stunned me," Frank Carideo, "Little Napoleon" of Rockne's 1929 and 1930 armies, said, as he cried outright.

"I was closer to Rock than most any other of the boys and perhaps I feel it more than most of them. To think that the man who taught me all the football in those sessions we had in private is gone. I don't want to believe it. I hope that God takes care of him like he took care of us. He treated us all like a father and we loved him all the more because he came back to us after his illness in 1929."

And what Carideo said was what all the rest of them said in different words.

Plans to honor Rockne's memory were advanced today, and there wasn't much doubt but what the new Notre Dame stadium, the stadium "Rock" built, would be renamed "Rockne Stadium." Such a plan was afoot last summer, only to be cast aside at Rockne's insistence.

KREMER, BUCS REACH TERMS ON CONTRACT

By Staff Correspondent.

LOS ANGELES, April 1.—The mystery of the Remy Kremer's contract was reported close to solution today. Although Manager Ens, of the Pirates, and Kremer did not discuss the strange case, the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph learned the point at issue had been cleared and that the new contract was on its way from Pittsburgh.

Kremer's salary was reported cut a couple of years ago after his brilliance had brought him all the way from a modest stipend to a princely $14,000.

Kremer slumped a bit after he had risen to one of the highest paid players on the club and then came the reduction.

FOCH DESCRIBES 'RACE TO SEA' BY ALLIES AND FOES

Massed French Soldiers, Conferred With British On Battle Plans

a combination of joint actions, which, although extending over large spaces and long periods of time, must necessarily be harmonized, if a favorable result is finally to be attained.

Commander
He Must Be Prepared To Surmount Crisis

Even if one of these actions should come to a standstill or one group of forces be particularly tried, the commander of the whole must unflinchingly stand by his general plan, at the same time stimulating or sustaining the failing action, but without ever admitting that it can be wholly renounced or that its weakness can cause the relinquishment or even any change in that plan.

Losses suffered at any given moment by a group of forces even so great as an army cannot justify any such disturbance in the combined operations of the other armies or in actions being pursued for the defense of the Allied interests as a whole.

The moral to be drawn from this idea—and it is applicable to all degrees in the hierarchy of command—is that the more anxious and disquieting the situation of his own troops may be, and the more critical the moment then facing him appears, the more urgent it is for any commander to push forward with unshaken energy his share in the general operations.

He must not let himself be influenced by the uncertainties and dangers of his own particular situation, this will always be restored by a general success. On the contrary, it is his duty to search his mind and call upon his imagination for means which will enable his troops to hold out until the crisis is over.

In my opinion, the victory of the Marne had fully justified this doctrine: the moment had come to apply it once more . . .

On October 8, after establishing his headquarters at Abbeville, Field Marshal French came to see me at Doullens. It was the first time I had met him since the beginning of the campaign. I was especially glad to see him once more. We had known each other for a long time, and the cordial reception he had always given me in former years, both in France and in England, left no doubt in my mind as to the frankness which would mark our relations, now that we were both engaged in a great war.

Among other news he brought was that of the capitulation of Antwerp. To his question as to what we could do to counter an event which had made the Germans master of all Belgium, I replied that we were still far from having effected junction with the Belgian army, and that our troops were a long way from the coast of the North Sea.

Confident
Marshal Was Sure Enemy Would Be Beaten

To my mind the question was whether we would arrive in time to achieve this two-fold object. All that could be said at the present moment was that every effort must be directed to attaining it; supposing that, meantime, we did not succeed in turning the enemy's northern wing.

My old friend, Sir Henry Wilson (subsequently to become a field marshal himself), was with Sir John French. I told him, with a certain amount of emotion, the happiness I felt at seeing him again, and I added that I was convinced that the rapid and effective entry of the British Army into the war was due to the preparatory measures which he, as head of the British General Staff, had made for that contingency.

Gen. Wilson had already given evidence of possessing those qualities of patriotic vigilance and far-sighted intelligence, which his later career was to brilliantly confirm.

For my part I did not find the general situation bad, and I was full of confidence. I had seen the enemy fail in Lorraine, and we had beaten him on the Marne. He was now attempting to restore his fortunes in the North, but we were holding our own.

The lightning stroke by which he expected to encompass France's destruction had been parried in victorious fashion, and Russia's weight could not be long now in making itself felt.

Furthermore, the results already obtained by our 2nd and 10th Armies and the imminent entry of the British forces into action, justified the hope that we would be able to make our maneuver to the North. Accordingly, on October 10, I wrote to the commander-in-chief [Joffre] as follows:

"GENERAL:

"I consider our situation very satisfactory. Castelnau is not budging nor, barring some incidents, are his Territorials, Maud'Huy is attacking around Arras. His success is slow but continued. Farther north our cavalry has just been driven back on to the line La Bassee-Bethune, but I do not attach great importance to that, because:

"At mid-day today the British II Corps will be at Bethune and Lillers and the British Cavalry Corps at Aire and Guarbecque. More British are detraining today at and in the neighborhood of St. Omer (which we hold); under these conditions, there seems little to fear from a German attack.

Audacity
Foch Found It Lacking In French Cavalry

"The 2nd Army is recovering its confidence. Duchesne's arrival will have an excellent effect. There is no more talk of a retreat, which, in any case, I have expressly forbidden. The cavalry has not yet sufficient audacity.

"I will return to Romilly whenever you desire, but I think that I am needed here, inasmuch as our forces are still not lined up, the advance has not yet been resumed and we have to consider a very extended territory, stretching as it does from Dunkirk through Lille to Noyon, and many incidents are possible.

"Please receive, General, the assurance of my respectful devotion,

(Signed): "FOCH."

"P. S.—If you approve and if Marshal French agrees, I propose to advance our left 10th Army by Lille to the Scheldt at Tournai or at Orchies, the British army moving in the direction of Lille and to the north of that town, and forming line from Tournai, through Courtrai. In this way all the French, British and Belgian detachments would be united on the left banks of either the Scheldt or the Lys. After that we can see."

Unity
Foch Urged It for Forces In Belgium

Since Marshal French expected to have on October 10 one corps (the II and two cavalry divisions ready to come into action, between Bethune and Aire, and on October 12 the III Corps and two cavalry divisions between Bethune and Saint Omer, we made disposition on the 10th for resuming the attack and clearing up the situation as soon as possible. These arrangements were set down in the following note:

"In the existing situation of the Allied Armies, the first thing to be done is, while acting with every precaution, to effect the union of the Belgian, British and French forces which, as a result of recent events, have become scattered.

"The area north and east of Lille, between the Scheldt and the Lys, seems to afford favorable ground for this operation.

"If tomorrow, the 11th, and the day after, the 12th, the left of the French 10th Army is supported by the British Army (II Corps and Cavalry Troops) operating on the front Bethune-Merville, it is anticipated that the road to Lille will be cleared.

"On the other hand, the area north of the line Merville - Hazebrouck - Cassel (which we hold) appears to be occupied only by weak forces.

"Under these conditions, it is believed that on the morning of the 13th, the left of the French army could march towards Lille and, later on, towards Tournai, the right of the British army towards the area north of Lille and, later on, towards Templeneuve, and the center of the British army, on Courtrai.

"With the Scheldt thus held at Tournai and the Lys held at Courtrai, the British, French and Belgian forces could be assembled behind these rivers.

Delays
British Forces Were Slow In Detraining

"If the field marshal commanding in chief the British army is in agreement with these views, the French army would be allotted for its movements the road Ostreville - Houdain - Verquigneul - La Bassee-Lille-Tournai and the roads to the South; the British army would use all roads to the north of these.

"I have the honor to ask if the above is approved.

"FOCH."

Sir John French undertook to support the operations of the French troops as fully and as promptly as possible. Owing, however, to delays in detraining the first division of the British 3rd Corps was not available till the afternoon of the 13th, and was not ready to move as a whole before the evening of the 15th.

In the meanwhile the 2nd Army held fast to its positions, but the northern wing of the 10th Army and the leading troops of the British army found their advance in the direction of Lille held up by repeated attacks which the enemy was developing in ever-increasing strength south of the Lys.

The arrival on the 15th of the British forces and their advance on the northern shore of the Lys marked our start in outflanking and enveloping the northern wing of the German armies operating in France. But a fresh storm was about to break.

New Menace
Another Channel Open For Invasion

The hostile forces that had been operating in Belgium, having been freed by the surrender of Antwerp, were now moving to this same northern bank of the Lys. A new channel had been opened for the invasion we had managed to dam in Picardy, in Artois and in French Flanders, and which we were trying to encircle on the Lys, from Armentieres to Menin.

A new theater of operations—Belgium—henceforth had to be considered, and steps must be immediately taken to meet a military situation which revived the menace to the Channel ports and the liaison between the Allies.

It was now a question of blocking the march "nach Calais" and of saving at least a portion of Belgium, whose very existence was threatened. Where could we effect that junction of the scattered Allied forces which was forecast in the note of October 10? The Lys and the Scheldt could no longer cover it.

What was the real fighting value of these forces? To what extent could their co-operation be counted upon? Behind what barrier could they be united so as to form at least an obstacle to the enemy's advance?

Rockne Master Story Teller, Disciplinarian, Builder of Gridiron Sport

KNUTE WITTY IN TALKS

CHICAGO, April 1.—(AP.)—Knute Rockne will be remembered first for his football accomplishments as "The Wizard of Notre Dame," but of all the figures in the athletic world, he was by far the most entertaining.

His fund of stories, told about himself and about his players, was inexhaustible and they were part of the tradition that has been built up around him. He never was backward about asserting his opinions about football and its conduct. He was involved in more controversies over rule-making than any other coach in America. His development of the forward pass and the open game of which the now much discused "shift" was the leading and most controversial feature, spread throughout the country until at present there are more than 100 coaches using it.

REAL WISECRACKER

Although only 43 years old, premature baldness, combined with his recent illness, made many think he was much older. Rockne was kidded quite a bit because of the absence of hair on his head. He stopped the wisecrackers with this remark:

"Well, Demosthenes didn't have any hair, either."

Never was Rockne without a wisecrack to fit every occasion. His tongue was as sharp as a sword and he would cut down a star football player just as soon as some stumbling fourth rater. His wisecracks and stories were gems.

One of Knute's select sayings was:

"Be a good loser, don't beef. But don't lose."

Another one:

"To hell with the guy who'll die for Notre Dame. I want men who will fight to keep it alive."

Once during a practice scrimmage he yelled:

"Heads up there, Joe, they won't give you a chance to tie your shoes in the Army game."

"Bend your knees, Joe. Throw away your knitting needles and get in the ball game. Remember, this is football, rough but manly."

STRICT MASTER

Rockne, possessing marvelous personality and magnetism, was a driver; yet there was nothing harsh about his methods. As an instructor in chemistry and as an instructor on the gridiron, he gave boys sufficient time to master his system, but had no time for the youngster who failed to grasp it. There was no place for that type in Rockne's teams or classes. He was an insistent master and uncompromising demander of discipline, but an understanding one, who was never harsh or abusive. He was famed as a master psychologist. Few had his knack of inspiring men.

In 1925 Northwestern, one of Notre Dame's major rivals, was beating the fighting Irish, 10 to 0, at the end of the half. Disgusted with the stumbling of his players, Rockne walked into the dressing room between halves, took one disgusted look at the athletes, sprawled on the floor and snarled to Assistant Coach Anderson:

"Fighting Irish, eh, well you can have my share of them."

Then he walked out. That Notre Dame team went back into the game fighting mad and in two successive drives down the field won the game, 13 to 10.

That was the way Rockne did things. He knew the reactions of his players. He knew their individual faults. He knew how to correct them.

TEACHES PLAYERS LESSONS

Rockne made frequent use of his story-telling capabilities in teaching little but important lessons on the practice field, too. Some of the most choice of this sort were those used to deflate the conceit of players who came to Notre Dame with fancy prep reputations.

Probably his favorite in this category was in the form of his between-halves condolence of a huge and highly rated Notre Dame tackle, who had found himself consistently brushed aside by his opponent during the first half.

"The whole trouble is," Rockne told him confidentially, "that fellow doesn't know who you are. Go out there next half and show him your clippings and he'll let you alone!"

Rockne was beloved by his players. Jack Elder, one of Rockne's greatest stars, now a newspaperman in Chicago, was kidding his former chief about signing up for a couple of charity games, the night before Rockne left for Kansas City, to depart westward and to his death in the air.

"No thanks," he replied, "I'm through. The last two games cost me $3,500. Hereafter when I'm approached to put on a charity game, I'll just send a check for $100. They found out I'm good for $100 for any charity."

And then there was Tom Lieb, who handled the team when Rockne was disabled by illness in 1929:

"He was more than a teacher of football," said Lieb. "He was a genius, but more than that he was a father to all of us at Notre Dame."

Gil Dobie, of Cornell, termed him "undoubtedly the most conspicuous figure American football ever has known."

"We at West Point," said Maj. Philip B. Fleming, graduate manager of athletics, "mourn the loss of a man whose sterling qualities endeared him to all persons who had the privilege of knowing him."

Speaking for the Western Conference, Commissioner John L. Griffith said that "others may think of him as one of the greatest football coaches the game ever has produced; I will always think of him as one of the finest, best and truest friends a man ever possessed."

ROCKNE FINDS PEACE AT LAST

the elite of the gridiron world groveled in the dust before the power, the speed, the dash and the unquenchable fire of Rockne's Ramblers.

Rockne's record against Carnegie Tech and Pitt was very impressive. In eight starts against the Tartans, Notre Dame won six times. The Irish were triumphant in '22, 19-0; in '23, 26-0; in '24, 40-19; in 25, 26-0, and then, in that memorable contest of 1926, lost to the great Tech eleven, led by All-American Howard Harpster, 19-0.

FINE RECORD HERE

In 1927 no game was scheduled, but in 1928 Carnegie won again, this time by a 27-7 score. In '29, in the first game between the two rivals here in the Stadium, Jack Elder raced 66 yards for a touchdown to bring Notre Dame a 7-0 win. Last year, at South Bend, it will be recalled that the Irish used Carnegie's ambitious and formidable eleven as a stepping stone to its third national championship, winning 21 to 6.

Against Pitt, Notre Dame won in 1909, 6-0. The score in 1911 was 0-0 and in 1912, 3-0. Last year came the decisive rout of the Panthers by the greatest team Rockne ever produced and one of the greatest, if not THE greatest of all time, by a score of 35 to 19.

Rockne was ever a friend of Pittsburgh. He was a friend of mine. He told me the last time he was in Pittsburgh that he enjoyed coming here; that the people were always friendly, and that they were the same whether he came with a great season behind him or a poor one.

LIKED NEWSPAPERMEN

It was always a joy to cover an assignment in South Bend, or in any town in which Rockne and Notre Dame might be. Rockne made you feel at home. He was pleased and happy and proud to take sporting writers he knew to his home. He didn't do it with the idea of publicizing himself, but because he liked to talk to newswriters and had the idea that some day he, too, would answer to the beck and call of the roaring presses.

Last fall, the Sunday after the Carnegie game in South Bend, Knute Rockne called this correspondent's room in the Oliver Hotel. He came up, had a bite of luncheon and then fell into an intimate discussion of football; of the Tech team; of the Notre Dame team, and of the elevens that were yet to be met.

"I think we have a pretty good team," Rockne said, "and I hope we go through. I'd like to win 'em all this year, because it's getting tougher each year and I'm due for a siege at Mayo Brothers' after this season. Better look out, I've had an offer or two from a couple papers. I may be a hated rival before long."

TRAGIC LOSS

Rock was a great fellow. It was impossible to remain his enemy. He had myriads of irons in the fire, but he still had time for the boys. Never a player left Notre Dame that didn't love Knute Rockne, who was never K. K. Rockne to them, never anything but Rock.

And Rock he'll remain. He's gone, and the loss is staggering, tragic. It will be a long, long while before anyone comes along to fill his place. Next football season isn't going to seem quite the same to those who knew Rock.

Rock is gone. He is with the heroes of the past, and it is a balm to the torn hearts of those of us who miss him here on earth to know that he has at last grasped once again the hands of those who preceded him.

Think of it—Rock and his beloved Gipp, hand in hand, arms about each other's shoulders. What a glorious finale!

Warner, Ingram Shocked at Loss Of Best Friend

GLENDALE, Cal., April 1.—(AP.)—Two great men of football—Navy Bill Ingram, coach of California, and Glenn (Pop) Warner, veteran mentor of Stanford—stepped smiling from an Air Transport plane here yesterday. They were beaming in the hopes of a reunion with the greatest of them all—their friend, Knute Rockne. They had flown from San Francisco.

"Knute can't be dead. I don't believe it," cried Navy Bill. Tears welled into the drawn eyes of old Pop Warner.

Then words failed the Stanford veteran.

"The best friend I ever had," said Navy Bill, who could not talk for 10 minutes after his first outburst. "He leaves a great work unfinished, for much as he has done for football, he had greater plans to bring it even to higher standards.'

KNUTE FIGHTS FOR CAREER

CHICAGO, April 1.—(AP.)—The career of a Norwegian immigrant boy, a career that reached heroic heights, has ended. Knute Rockne is dead.

The man whose keen mind and matchless leadership made Notre Dame, "that little college in the Middle West," the greatest power in intercollegiate football, passed on yesterday as he had lived, in action. An airplane disaster in Kansas claimed his life, but cannot quench the memory of his accomplishments.

Rockne was born in Voss, a Norwegian village, March 4, 1888, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Rockne. The first four years of his life were spent in Norway; then his father, a carriage maker, brought one of his products to the World Fair at Chicago in 1893. His exhibit won a medal, and he decided to make Chicago his home, and sent for his family, which arrived two months later.

The elder Rockne was able to put young Knute through grammar school, but it was necessary for the future wizard of football and psychology to earn his way through high school and college.

PLAYED BASEBALL

While he was a youngster in the Logan Square district, Rockne was more interested in athletics than anything else, but concentrated on baseball. It was not until he attended Northwest Division High that he became interested in football and track. His famous scarred nose was caused by a blow from a baseball bat during a kid game.

He was graduated from high school in 1907, but did not reach Notre Dame until 1911, for the simple reason that he didn't have enough money to go to college. He was determined, however, that he would attend the University of Illinois, and it was because two close friends had decided on Notre Dame, that he changed his plans.

During the four years following his graduation from high school he worked at various jobs, but most of the time was spent in the employ of the postoffice. He also worked on lake steamers and did odd jobs, and after a raise of 50 cents a week at the postoffice failed to satisfy him, he borrowed $45 and went to Notre Dame.

PUT IRISH ON MAP

Not much was heard of Knute Rockne as an athlete until one amazing afternoon in 1913 on the plains of West Point when Rockne tore down the field all afternoon under forward passes flung by Charles E. (Gus) Dorais, Notre Dame's quarterback then, and coach at the University of Detroit now, to aid the Irish defeat the Army, 33 to 13.

His wit made him in demand as a writer, after dinner speaker and radio speaker. He did his own writing and made his speeches extemporaneously.

Bobby Jones' Golf Lessons

By Robt. Jones.

American Open, British Open, American Amateur and British Amateur Champion.

The fact that the British open golf championship is to be played at Carnoustie this year—the first time at that famous old course—brings to mind a few comparisons and contrasts which may be of some interest.

Bobby Jones

In the first place, Carnoustie is a public course, just as St. Andrews is a public course, where anyone may play upon the payment of the proper green fee. St. Andrews particularly, I suppose, is often thought of as the course of the Royal and Ancient Club, but as a matter of fact the course is owned by the city of St. Andrews. The club makes a certain annual contribution toward the upkeep of the links, and in exchange its members have allotted to them certain starting times between specified hours in the morning and afternoon. At other times it is entirely a matter of first come, first served. Of course, this seems strange, over here, where all of our championships are played over private club courses.

Carnoustie is a very long golf course, requiring under normal conditions a good many second shots with the long irons, the spoon and the brassie. Of course if the ground becomes hard this condition is greatly modified, but the course is very little easier, because there are many cross-bunkers in front of the greens which makes the approaching difficult indeed when the greens dry out and become hard and fast.

LAST FIVE HOLES TOUGH

Some of the holes at Carnoustie, because they require some "big hitting," remind me very much of the five finishing holes at Hoylake, particularly the fourteenth, fifteenth and sixteenth at the latter course. The last five holes at Hoylake probably foot up more yardage than any other five finishing holes in the world—2,288 yards, or a fraction less than an average of 458 yards to the hole. It will not be hard to convince anybody, I think, that if one is to make a score at Hoylake, he must make that score in the first 13 holes, because no man living is likely to pick up many strokes in those last five.

In this respect, Hoylake and St. Andrews are a good bit alike. At Hoylake it is a question of doing something in the first 13 holes, and at St. Andrews in the first 12. These are the two courses in the British Isles which I like best of all; and they are the two which I think are exceptionally good championship tests. One queer thing is that St. Andrews becomes more difficult as the course dries out and becomes fast, while Hoylake becomes easier under these conditions—up to a certain point. The reason for this, I think, is that the golf at Hoylake is perfectly obvious. It is more like our American courses, in that the fairways are quite clearly defined and the golf entirely straightforward.

PLENTY OF HAZARDS

St. Andrews, on the other hand, is the least obvious course in the world. It is covered with concealed rolls, bunkers, hollows and hummocks, which become more and more bewildering as the ground becomes harder. When St. Andrews is fast, an immense amount of local knowledge is needed.

I think probably if we were to select the five finishing holes on these two courses for a comparison, we might decide that the finish at Hoylake was a bit tougher than the finish at St. Andrews, although I believe it is possible to get into more costly trouble on the Old Course. But I think if we put in the thirteenth hole at both places that this would about swing the balance in favor of St. Andrews in the matter of difficulty. I have had several experiences, after turning the "loop" and passing the twelfth hole, of setting out for home against a strong breeze blowing off the sea. And, believe me, it is no unpleasant experience when strokes are dear.

At Hoylake, my observation is that, while you may very easily finish with a flock of 5's, you are unlikely to take more than that on any hole; while at St. Andrews the limitation often appears to have been removed in the last third of the journey.

St. John's Keep Lyceum Laurels

The St. John's Lyceum passers retained the Catholic Lyceum League title last night by defeating St. Joseph's in the third and deciding battle of a three-game series, winning 32-28 at Duquesne University. The Lengwin boys starred for the victors, while Boeggeman played best for the losers.

The Knickers dropped the first battle of their playoff series to settle the West Penn League deadlock to the Schneiders at Forresters Hall last night, 38-29, in a game that required three extra periods.

STOCK MARKET SAGS IN DULL TRADING

Renewed Selling of Rails Drops Half Dozen Leading Carriers to 1931 Lows

NEW YORK, April 1.—(AP.)—The stock market greeted the new month and the second quarter with a slow decline. Renewed selling of the rails, putting half a dozen prominent carriers into new low ground for the year, found other groups heavy, but trading throughout the list was very dull.

Losses in the rails ran from 1 to 4 points. Industrials and utilities, as a rule, yielded more grudgingly, although the chemicals were weak. Steels did not like the reduction in ingot output during the last week and showed general recessions, although Wall street does not seem ready to believe that the seasonal peak has been passed.

Iron Age estimates ingot production at 55 per cent against 57 per cent a week ago; yet the present rate is nearly three-fourths the average of 1923, which was the record year prior to the boom times of 1929.

Demand for structural steel is holding up, fortified by Pennsylvania's contracts for 100,000 tons to take care of its improvement program. The let-down in the automobile contracts signifies the caution with which that industry is making its plans, and also suggests that earlier estimates of requirements were perhaps a little too generous.

There were at least two encouraging items in the day's news. One was the gain in freight car loadings for the week ended March 21—a large increase than had been anticipated; the other was the improvement in electric power output last week.

National City Bank's monthly review of business was noncommital as to the immediate future, although it repeated the familiar statement that business had reached "the bottom of the valley." The recovery, it added, has so far been slow and spotty, and "its permanence is still a matter of opinion rather than practical demonstration."

Money was firm with the opening of April, which brings a large quota of dividend and interest payments. Some loan calling was reported.

Railroad Profits Lowest Since 1921

NEW YORK, April 1.—On the basis of February railroad earnings received to date, all Class 1 roads had net operating income aggregating about $27,300,000, or the lowest for any month since February, 1921, when a deficit of $5,164,000 was reported. The showing in February represented a decline of about 54 per cent from February 1930, and a decrease of 67.7 per cent below February, 1920. January, 1931, net operating income was the lowest since 1922.

GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, April 1.—With April monthly private crop estimates expected to make a bearish showing, grain prices averaged lower early today. It was expected that the figures of the condition of domestic winter wheat would range from 91 to 92.5 per cent as against a 10-year average of 79.2. Wheat opened at ⅛ cent off to ½ up, and subsequently underwent additional downturns. Corn started ⅛ and ½ lower, and afterward declined further.

Electric Power Production Improves

NEW YORK, April 1.—Electric power output, an important barometer of industrial activity, continues to improve. Production of electricity in the week ended March 28 shows a decline of only 1.5 per cent from the corresponding period of 1930, the best comparison in some time. For the week ended March 21 the drop was 2.3 per cent. The Atlantic Seaboard shows a slight gain over last year, but the central industrial region registers virtually no change, remaining about 5.4 per cent under 1930.

BUILDING WORK AIDS STEEL

NEW YORK, April 1.—The Iron Age in its weekly summary of the iron and steel trade tomorrow will say:

The award of 124,900 tons of structural steel work by the Pennsylvania Railroad, less than a fortnight after the placing of 125,000 tons for the radio city project in New York, has made construction activity the center of interest in the iron and steel market. Including the Pennsylvania letting, fabricating contracts for the week reached the record total of 166,000 tons, forging ahead of the 155,000 tons reported in the previous week.

A large amount of fabricating steel is still pending and many additional structural projects will doubtless mature with the coming of open weather, which is counted on to give impetus to construction work generally, not merely expediting the placing of bridge and building contracts, but hastening the closing of heavy inquiries for line pipe and the launching of extensive highway programs and other public engineering work.

The rising importance of construction work as an outlet for tonnage again directs attention to the wave-like character of steel demand since the year opened. Inventory replenishment, together with rail and tin plate tonnage, accounted for most of the improvement in mill operations early in the quarter.

Later a fresh stimulus was provided by the growing needs of the automobile industry. In the past week or two specifications from the motor car builders have receded, and the operations of some mills, particularly those making flat rolled products, have been adversely affected. This setback, however, is not regarded as signifying anything more than exaggerated caution, since April output of motor vehicles for this country and Canada promises to total 330,000 to 350,000 units, as compared with an estimated production of 275,000 to 300,000 in March, and further seasonal gains seem probable in May. The keynote of the situation is that automobile makers are taking nothing for granted, in some cases readjusting factory operations every seven days as reports come in from the retail trade.

Close range specifying by the motor car industry and irregularities in demands from other sources have resulted ni a slight reduction in average raw steel output, ingot production now being estimated at 55 per cent as compared with 57 per cent in the two previous weeks. Chicago, Buffalo, the Wheeling district, Youngstown and Pittsburgh all reported declines most of them small.

The price situation shows signs of clarifying.

March Brought Bad Dividend Showing, But—

—By B. C. FORBES—

OWEN D. YOUNG wires me, from his vacation retreat in Arizona, this delightful refusal to send this column a comment on Germany's and Austria's pact to abolish the tariff wall between them:

Mr. Forbes

"For about three weeks I expect to forget there is such a thing as tariffs or business or anything in the world but sunshine and flowers."

European statesmen, especially Briand, have indulged in a lot of talk about removing trade barriers, forming an economic United States of Europe and other Utopian reforms. The talk sounded most friendly and idealistic. But when Germany and Austria took actual action along the lines airily advocated, what a hubbub arose! It was as if a bomb had been dropped in the midst of Europe.

Germany and Austria naively profess astonishment. They ask:

"Haven't we done exactly what has been so cordially recommended? We suggest you all follow the example; thus the United States of Europe will become an economic reality."

Germany's motive may not have been altruistic, but her abrupt action has put other European nations on the defensive. It remains to be seen whether the League of Nations will contrive to prevent the Austro-German tariff pact—and on what grounds. Haven't Germany and Austria not only taken Briand's pan-European talk seriously, but acted on the principle recommended by a group of ultra-eminent American gentlemen, namely, that inter-European tariff barriers be razed or drastically lowered?

One suspects there is a very big joker in the Berlin-Vienna coup; but the joke most certainly is not on Germany and Austria.

VIOLENT FIRES burn themselves out quickly.

That's about the only consolation one can draw from the March dividend news. The showing made is the worst yet. The unfavorable announcements outnumber the favorable by 2½ to 1.

Not only so, but adverse action was taken by an unusual number of extremely important corporations.

The favorable announcements last month were made by 72 industrial companies, seven railroads and one utility; the unfavorable by 183 industrials, 12 railroads and 10 utility companies.

THE SECOND quarter of the year doubtless will continue to bring an unpleasant number of dividend reductions. But thereafter a less discouraging showing should be made.

(Copyright, 1931, by B. C. Forbes.)

Eaton Enjoined in Continental Suit

BALTIMORE, April 1.—Continental Shares, Inc., Cyrus S. Eaton and other officers of the corporation were given until April 28 to answer the injunction order recently granted in Circuit Court in proceedings instituted by George L. Gugle, of Columbus, O., holder of 748 common shares of the company, who seeks an accounting and an injunction to restrain officers and directors from holding a meeting called for the purpose of having stockholders ratify transactions of the corporation during the last six months of 1930.

Pennsylvania Railroad Earns $5.28 a Share

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

THE ANNUAL REPORT of the Pennsylvania Railroad made public today indicates increased efficiency in operations and shows that the system has been able to withstand the effects of the general business depression more readily than many other carriers.

Net income of $68,809,818 was equivalent to $5.25 a share on the stock of $50 par value. This compared with $8.82 a share in 1929.

While earnings were sharply reduced last year, they covered dividend requirements of $4 a share by a comfortable margin and permitted the company to add nearly $11,500,000 to surplus.

Ratio Maintained

THE OPERATING RATIO, which is the percentage of operating revenue required to pay operating expenses, showed a progressive improvement through the eight years ended with 1929. While the ratio for 1930 was higher than in 1928 and 1929, it was lower than for any of the preceding seven years.

In view of the declining traffic and the fact that railroads cannot institute operating economies as readily as industrial organizations, the results for the year may be considered quite satisfactory.

Economies Shown

IN COMMENTING ON THIS, Gen. W. W. Atterbury, president, said:

"To illustrate the savings effected through reduced operating costs during this 10-year period, 1921-1930, the largest gross operating revenues of your system were in 1923, when they amounted to $775,000,000, or $159,000,000 greater than in 1930, but the operating expenses were $634,000,000, or $175,000,000 greater than in 1930, so that the net revenue from railway operations in 1930 was $16,000,000 greater than in 1923, notwithstanding the decrease of $159,000,000 in operating revenues."

Gen. Atterbury also pointed to the fact that the railroads of the country as a whole have been making large expenditures for improvements to establish higher standards of service. In 1930 these amounted to $900,000,000 and in the last eight years they reached almost $7,000,000,000. The net return for the railroads, however, was only about 3.4 per cent on their investment last year. This was less than in any year since 1921 and contrasted with 5 per cent in 1929.

Results Compare Favorably

THE STATEMENTS OF SOME of the other leading carriers make Pennsylvania's results for the past year stand in an exceptionally favorable light. A study of 20 representative dividend paying railroads made by the Wall Street Journal shows that only 11 earned their common dividends in the 12 months ended February 28, 1931, even after allowing for the recent reductions in the dividend rates of seven of these carriers.

The nine roads which failed to earn their current dividend needs in the 12 months ended February 28 include five which already have reduced their rates, and yet did not show the newly established basis earned in that period. The five are the New York Central, Lackawanna, Lehigh Valley, Chicago and North Western and Pere Marquette.

The remaining four roads which are not earning their current dividend rates are the Atlantic Coast Line, Canadian Pacific, Illinois Central and Southern Railway.

NEW YORK BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, April 1.—Trading in the bond department today lacked a definite trend. Net changes among the most active issues were divided about evenly between gains and declines.

NEW YORK, April 1.—(AP.)—Transactions in the most active bonds on the New York Stock Exchange today were as follows, 000 omitted in sales column (United States bonds in dollars and thirty-seconds of dollars):

Travers' Memory Clears After Excitement

CHAPTER XLI.

Jenny Wynne gave one look at the small, distraught face, threw in her gear without a word, and the car slid off smoothly, gathering speed.

"Tell me," she said quietly, "what has happened. I'm your friend, and you know it. And I'm absolutely at your service."

As they went toward Northmill Mary Lou told her—the truth—in short, choked sentences. Jenny, her hands steady on the wheel, listened and tried to understand. No time now for detailed explanations, for exclamations and questions.

"Larry knew, of course, all along. It was he who gave me the advertisement to read. I always hated your not knowing, Jenny, after we became such close friends. Now you know."

"Yes. What are you going to do?" said Jenny, and added, "Mary Lou?"

A True Friend

"I'm going to town. To Oakdale, I suppose. I have to get away. From all of them. I precipitated this on them. I didn't mean to. I meant to persuade Mrs. Lorrimer to—see Delight Harford, to realize that it was the only decent thing to do, that she owed it to her and to Lorry to clear up this whole mistaken situation."

"If you go to Oakdale," said Jenny, "they'll find you."

Mary Lou said nothing. The Northmill station was coming into view.

"Have you money?" asked Jenny practically.

"Yes. Plenty. Oh, Jenny, am I a coward, not to see this through?" pleaded Mary Lou.

"No." Jenny stopped the car at the station, put her arms about the other girl and kissed her. "No, you're a brick. I love you. So does Lorry. Keep in touch with us, Mary Lou. Promise?"

Mary Lou shook her head.

"Not now. Later, perhaps," she said.

"All right. It's up to you. But if you ever need anything, want anything, you've Larry and me. Remember that. And we won't give you away. If you want to stay—incognito, we'll respect that. Believe me."

"Of course—oh bless you, Jenny, you're heavenly kind to me."

She heard the whistle of the train up the track, clung to Jenny a moment, a wet cheek against her own, said, choked:

"I'll never forget all you've been to me, Jenny. Please don't tell them you saw me. Tell Larry but no one else. Please don't tell them where you took me."

"All right," said Jenny.

A few moments later she saw the train pull out, saw the small, beseeching face at the window, and waved. Then she sat there a moment, in the car, deep in bewildered, tangled and amazed thought. Whatever had happened, she was Mary Lou's friend. She loved her, under any name. The whole situation was too complicated. She'd see Larry, talk it over with him. It was perfectly plain to Jenny that Mary Lou was in love with Lorrimer, and he with her. She despised this other unknown girl who had come out of the blue in order to take what was probably her rightful place. But the real Delight Harford had no friend in Jenny.

Meantime, back at Westwood House:

"Why—where is she? She was here—a minute ago," said Lorrimer blankly.

Delight said nothing. She had seen Mary Lou go; had withheld an impulse to call her back. The truth was out anyway. If the girl felt safer in flight, then it was kinder not to speak. Lorrimer stepped away, took his head in his hands.

"I must be going mad," he said, bewildered, rather tragically.

Taken Into House

"No, listen to me, Lorry. It's all quite simple. That girl came to your house to get a job. You saw her, mistook her for me. Your condition was such that your mother dared not tell you the truth. She has simply pretended to be—Delight Harford. That's all."

"But—but——"

"I think," said Delight clearly, "that I see your mother coming, Lorry."

Margaret came up, a little out of breath. Peter was with her, and one of the gardeners. She had bandage and bandage scissors in her hand, utterly ignorant as to the identity of the stranger or the extent of her accident as she was.

"Travers," she began, and then, quickly, stricken, "You!"

Delight said, smiling a little, not a pleasant smile:

"You know me, too?"

"Yes," said Mrs. Lorrimer shortly. "Come, Travers—Peter—between all of you we can get her to the house."

"But Mother," began Lorrimer, wildly, frantically.

Mrs. Lorrimer looked at him a moment. Pity for him, terror, anger, all fought in her eyes for mastery. She said, slowly:

"She's in no condition to be kept standing here." She indicated Peter and the other man, with a gesture of her hand. "We'll all be better off at the house," said Margaret Lorrimer.

Supported by Peter and the gardener—as Lorrimer made no move to touch her—Delight was taken to the house. Lorrimer and his mother walked beside her, a strange little procession. No word was spoken.

In the library she was put into a big chair. Peter was sent to telephone Dr. Mathews. Someone else was sent for a stimulant. Then they faced each other alone, the three of them.

"How did this happen?" asked Mrs. Lorrimer quietly.

"She came to me," Delight said wearily, regarding the injured ankle which was stretched out on a footstool. "She came yesterday morning and told me—"

Actress Explains

"Who did?" asked Lorrimer sharply.

"That girl. Miss Thurston. She told me that she knew who I was, really. I'd been fool enough to tell that young press agent, Mitchell, my name. She told me that you knew, Mrs. Lorrimer, and that apparently you were not going to tell your son. She wasn't sure what you would do. She felt that—that her loyalty lay with Lorry, and, strangely enough, with me; that it was only fair both of us should know the truth. And she asked me to give her a week in which to bring you to her point of view. After that, if you were still set on Lorry's not knowing, she would leave it up to me."

She sighed. There was a silence. She went on:

"I promised. But on an impulse I came here, found out where you lived and all. Easy enough. I overheard Lorry and—the other girl talking. I made up my mind to go away and, no matter what you decided, Mrs. Lorrimer, to stay away. I started for the gate, turned my ankle and fell."

She looked at them both, a little defiantly.

"We're all in it now," she said; "no use trying to escape. What are you going to do?"

Peter entered the room to say that Mr. Mathews would be right over.

"Go to Miss—" Mrs. Lorrimer hesitated and said, firmly, "Miss Thurston's room and ask her to please come to the library."

Peter took the message without a quiver of the eyelid and left the room.

Lorrimer said blankly:

"Where — Delight — we've searched for you, all over. There was no trace." He looked at her. This was the girl he had loved and lost. She had returned to him. That other girl had been an impostor. Yet he had loved her, thinking her Delight. But this was Delight.

Delight Harford said, a little harshly:

Memory Clears

"Does that matter, now? Time enough for all that later."

Peter returned. He had, in his old hand, a ring and an envelope with a little penciled scrawl across its surface.

"Miss Thurston is not in her room," he reported.

Mrs. Lorrimer took the envelope. She looked at it a moment, said blankly, "She's gone."

Delight smiled, a little. Gone. Well, she'd done her best for the girl. She could do no more. She'd been willing to clear out but now . . . She looked about the lovely room, and drew a deep breath. Comfort, safety, if she played the cards right. Should she play them . . . at all?

Mrs. Lorrimer dropped the envelope on a table. She stood up and faced her son and this stranger—this woman she disliked so intensely. She said, with a hard white austerity:

"There is, as I see it, just one question which is important now. Did you," she asked Delight, "did you marry my son? If so, have you proofs of that marriage? Are you married?" she repeated.

Delight hesitated. Looked at Lorrimer. Waited. Lorrimer spoke, and his face was gray.

"I remember now," he said heavily. "No!"

Midinette DAILY TRUE STORY

"I see," said Duchess Helene d'Arnier, "that the courts have settled the entire estate of Deboussy on the daughter."

The young Duc d'Arnier yawned.

"Mater — mater—Deboussy is a corporation. A corporation does not have a daughter," he said, assuming the wisdom of the male head of the house of d'Arnier.

The duchess looked at her son for a thoughtful moment.

"Henri," she finally said, "you do not understand."

"You said—"

"Listen, mon enfant, when I said 'Deboussy,' I meant that the fortunes of the house of Deboussy had gone to Mlle. Morin. Surely you know that Jean Morin owned all of the great establishment of Deboussy. His grandfather established it and named it for his bride's family as a tribute to the 10,000 francs he got as his wife's dot."

"Explanations are so tiresome, mon mere. Who cares for the Morins? Commoners. Tradespeople. Er—how much do you owe them for gowns?"

Duchess Helen flushed angrily.

"Does one know such things? One cannot keep track."

"I was wondering."

The duchess watched her handsome son rather narrowly as he strolled over to the windows and looked on the boulevard.

"I think I shall run along to St. Moritz with the Trevassieurs. The snow is perfection, the ice equally so."

His mother made no reply.

"Hear me, mon ami?" he asked finally.

"St. Moritz, you said?"

"Yes. Have you, say, 500 francs handy, or shall I get the Monsieur le Avocat?"

"I have no 500 francs handy, Henri, and Monsieur le Avocat will merely scold. He is always scolding."

"Broke, eh? Oh, well, sell something again—there's the land in Brittany."

"We have sold too much of the Bretagne estates as it is. Er—have you ever met this Mlle. Morin?"

"Who?"

"Mlle. Morin," his mother repeated patiently.

"Possibly, one meets so many these days. What is her family?"

"Herself—and Deboussy."

"Oh—you mean the girl who inherited the gown shop—" Henri Duc d'Arnier paused a moment and stared suspiciously at his mother.

"Look here, mater — what's this? Have you run up a half million francs or so in bills at Deboussy's?"

"Er—possibly, but what is that?"

"And I can't squeeze out five hundred for the sports at St. Moritz. Tut, tut, mon mere is extravagant."

He shook his finger at his beloved mother and then kissed her hand.

"They say Mlle. Morin is charming, chic, educated."

Henri, le Duc d'Arnier, lighted a cigaret, walked to the window, stared down at the boulevard and came back to his mother.

"And is it your plan to use me," he tapped himself, "to pay your extravagant gown bills at Deboussy's?"

Suspicious Look

"Oh, mon enfant, that is most unkind."

He didn't know whether she meant it or was laughing at him. They were interrupted at this point. A servant announced the delivery of another gown to the duchess and stated that the midinette insisted on delivering it herself.

The girl came in with the gown. She opened the box. The duchess was pleased. It suited her. She gave the girl a silver coin and the girl departed.

"So—this is your trick?" Henri thought. But he said nothing to his mother that he was wise to her. If she wanted to have this heiress, Mlle. Morin, come to the house this way, all right, but he, Henri, le Duc d' Arnier, would not fall in love, with any such plain girl, not if she had a million francs.

"Pretty girl," he said, to tease his mother.

"I didn't notice," the duchess replied.

Her son grinned. She was overdoing it.

"Devilish pretty girl—if one likes that type. As for me, I cannot abide carroty hair and bulging foreheads on girls."

"I didn't notice, I tell you. But speaking of Deboussy, did it occur to you that this Mlle. Morin, who now owns the great company is worth millions on millions?"

However, the wise duchess dropped the subject for the time being.

She had a conference with M. Jontier, her lawyer, and he, in turn, called at the big establishment Deboussy and talked in the little private office with Mlle. Morin.

"And since this young Duc d'Arnier read of my fortune he desires marriage?" she asked.

"Non, non. He knows nothing of this. It is his mother's wish. Duchesse Helen d'Arnier. Surely you have met her?"

"I have met no one. I seldom came here before Papa's death."

Disappointed With Report

"It is an old and honorable family, Mlle. Morin. Will you consider the alliance?"

"And this young man. What about him? Silly, dissipated, no good—I know them all—"

"Non, non. Henri, le Duc d'Arnier, is not like that. A splendid young man, well trained, well educated, excellent at le sports, really, a splendid young man."

Mlle. Morin laughed gaily.

"Honestly now—and I'll be honest with you, M. le Avocat, did he not send you?"

"He did not. He knows nothing about this, to my belief."

"You may tell the kind duchesse of my appreciation and I shall think it over."

Helene, Duchesse d'Arnier, was rather disappointed at the report her lawyer made. She had believed this Mlle. Morin would fairly leap at the opportunity to marry her son. She thought that her only difficulty lay in making her son agree to the marriage. However, she had to accept it.

Henri went to St. Moritz, as he knew he would. His doting mother found the money for it—as she always did.

Back home again and his mother was getting ready for the coming season at her tiny chateau near Cannes. There must be some of the newest spring frocks.

Beautiful Girl

She went to Deboussy's, as usual. She asked if Mlle. Morin were about. An investigation was made and she was informed that Mlle. Morin seldom came to the place. Mlle. Morin ordered this word sent out. She didn't like to be sought in this manner.

The duchesse sighed. She ordered. She even paid a few hundred francs on her old bill just to make an impression.

The young Duc d'Arnier was home when the spring frocks were delivered. He purposely remained because he believed that once more this Mlle Morin, disguised as a midinette, would appear. He remembered her bulging forehead and carroty hair.

But, no, another midinette came. Her clothes were terribly shabby for such a splendid house as the Deboussy, but one forgot her clothes when he saw how pretty she was—at least the young duc did.

He yawned and left the house, got in his car and waited at the corner. When the midinette came he invited her in. She got in his car. Could she sneak a little time for a ride? She would venture 15 minutes, no more. She could say that the lady was fussy and delayed her.

"Is your name Fifi? Most midinettes have that name, I have read," Henri said.

"Alas, no, plain Joan," the little midinette confessed.

Henri made an appointment for the next day at the noon hour. This time Joan, the little midinette, wore slightly better clothes, evidently her best, for the occasion.

Henri wanted to call on her.

"I live alone in a room, I cannot permit that," the little midinette said, "but at the home of mon tante—if you would come. A poor place, but clean."

He went. He found her aunt to be a plump, pleasant woman who said little and kept to another room.

"Tell me about this Mlle. Morin, Joan?" he asked.

Reveals Identity

"One lovely young lady—so kind to us, but, alas, not pretty."

"I see, big bulging forehead and carroty hair?"

"Ah, then you have seen her?"

"Oh, yes, my dear. But we will talk of you—it is more pleasant. I shall kiss you—"

The little midinette pushed him away. "You may have one kiss, when you go, and mon tante is here. Now tell me, is it true what we hear, that your mother wishes you to marry Mlle. Morin?"

"Perhaps—but I shall not—I shall marry you. I shall bring you home and if mon mere does not like it we will go some place. I am an expert mechanic—we shall be happy."

And so Henri, Duc d'Arnier, gave little Joan money for a pretty frock and took her bravely home to his mother.

"It is love, mon mama, I must marry her," he said.

"Love," said the duchesse, "is everything."

When they were alone Joan broke down. She confessed. She was Joan Morin, she was the Mlle. Morin, she had come as a midinette to see what Henri was like. Yes—she loved him. Yes—they would be married."

And they were.

And Joan, much as she loved her wonderful husband, never told him that it was the plan of Helene, Duchesse d'Arnier, that she come there as a midinette.

Political Appointments

Lang Admits That Kline Selects Job Holders in His Department.

Edward G. Lang, director of the Department of Public Works, yesterday admitted that Mayor Kline orders appointments of unfit persons "for political reasons."

Deplorable as the spoils system of political office holding may be, there is nothing particularly new or surprising about it.

But the disregard of ability in making appointments to public positions is not justified because it has become an established custom in some cities. The efficient operation of many city departments is primarily dependent on organizations composed of competent men with adequate technical knowledge of their business.

Office holders, appointed for political purposes, are likely to cause wasteful operation in any branch of the city administration, but they can do more harm in the Public Works Department than in almost any other. The spoils system is a burden to all branches of the city administration, but it is at its worst where engineering experience is needed.

The disheartening thing about the present scandal is the fact that the people of Pittsburgh, when they elected Kline Mayor, knew that he was a political machine leader and a distributor of patronage.

Capital Punishment

Leading Papers Present Evidence of Death Penalty's Failure.

The belief that legalized murder in the form of the death penalty is a failure in checking crime is spreading among all civilized peoples.

The use of the noose in England is frequently mentioned the outstanding example of the effectiveness of the supreme penalty in suppressing crime. But in that country also opposition to capital punishment is growing.

The Manchester Guardian reflected this changing viewpoint in a recent editorial charging that juries seldom convict the accused of first degree murder. Such a declaration from a leading English newspaper is indicative of a more intelligent attitude toward the punishment of crime.

In discussing the Guardian's editorial the Detroit Times says:

"If capital punishment were a success in England there wouldn't be the widespread demand there for its abolition.

"If capital punishment reduces crime in England, it seems fair to ask, why doesn't it reduce crime in the 40 capital punishment states of America? Why are such outstanding governors of capital punishment states as Ely of Massachusetts, Pinchot of Pennsylvania, and Pollard of Virginia, doubtful of its value?

"Why, if capital punishment is successful in 40 states of the Union, was it impossible for International News Service correspondents in their survey for the Times to find more than 10 governors who were for it?

"The answer has often been given by students of criminology—it is the certainty and swiftness of punishment rather than severity that deters crime."

For Another Senator

Harris Bill Provides for Additional Representation From Allegheny County.

Public policy calls for the support of the bill introduced in the State Senate by Senator Frank J. Harris providing for a realignment of the senatorial districts of the state. Among its provisions is one giving Allegheny County an additional member of the Upper House, proposing that the number be seven instead of six.

The measure has the support of the Allied Boards of Trade and it is based on the fact that increase of population in our county calls for an increased representation.

Although our gain in representation likely would be made at the expense of representation in some less populous districts, there is no injustice in that, since they still would have representation in proportion to the number of people living in them, and we would be getting what we are entitled to.

Senator Harris is to be commended for his attempt to see that we get what is honestly due in such matters.

Better Seers Demanded

Noble Racket Held Up to Scorn by Failure of Craft to Check Up.

John McGonigle, precinct detective attached to the Oakland station, challenged a seeress to tell his fortune. She may be a good seeress, but even the best of them make mistakes. Instead of telling McGonigle's fortune she should have done a little "seering" for herself. She began to tell McGonigle about a "dark woman," etc., and the first thing she knew she was pinched.

Now let that be a lesson to all seers, seeresses and all the little serials. No doctor thinks he has all the medical wisdom in the world. So he goes to another doctor to get the low-down on himself every once in a while. Seers should visit other seers to find out about themselves, too. Had Detective McGonigle's seer done that she wouldn't have brought shame upon a noble racket and held all seers up to suspicion that perhaps they don't know so much about the future after all.

If this neglect of seers to check up on themselves is general—and it appears to be—we are almost tempted to state that under such conditions patrons who go to them are mere suckers. Indeed, we have yielded to temptation and do so state. Let us have better seers or not any.

Dried Up

The islands once were rich and green
And prosperous and Wet,
Before we graciously conferred
The blessings of our pet
Reform upon the backward isles
That now are properly
Dried up until they're arid spots
Enjoying poverty.

Marry-Go-Round

Marriage as a Speculation

"Why I Never Married" is the caption over a current series of confessions. Any woman could answer that without a moment's hesitation.

* * *

When a man or woman stays single it is always for a good, big reason. But if somebody should ask why we DID marry, lots of women would have to stop and think a long time before replying.

Once, there was no question about it. If you didn't marry, you were a failure in the eyes of the world and a bitter disappointment to the family. Laurels were no substitute for orange blossoms; and a wedding-ring was a greater prize than a college degree or a loving-cup.

But all that is OUT—as quaint as a joke about a horse and buggy! Girls, as well as young men, are beginning to look upon marriage as a gamble rather than as a goal. And a husband is regarded as a speculation, rather than as life's greatest necessity.

If you haven't got a husband you can never be sure of an escort to take you where you want to go. But if you HAVE a husband you can be pretty sure that he will want to take you somewhere that you don't want to go.

If you are single you have to sit around and wait for a man to stop talking about himself and go home, nights. And if you are married you have to sit up and wait for him to come home, nights. So you don't get much sleep either way.

If you haven't a husband you may have to wait all evening for somebody to show up and devote himself to you. And if you have a husband you may have to hang around all evening waiting for him to stop devoting himself to some other woman.

If you are "nobody's darling," you may have to work hard for your money—but you can spend it as foolishly as you like. And if you are "somebody's rib," you may have to work twice as hard to get hold of any money, and then have to explain what you did with it.

* * *

If you are unattached the men all suspect that you have deep, dark designs on them. And if you are married you suspect all the women of having deep, dark designs on your husband. So you don't get much comfort either way.

THE DIRIGIBLE'S FUTURE

By Archibald Henderson

One of the greatest airships ever built was the British R-101. It was 777 feet in length, diameter 131 feet and 8 inches, height 140 feet, and capacity 5,500,000 cubic feet. Yet the horrible disaster, the complete destruction of this mighty flier with the loss of many lives, on October 5, last, once again raises a huge question mark over the future of the airship. In his latter years, Count Zeppelin frankly acknowledged the failure of the dirigible as a weapon of war. And the loss of the R-101 inclines many engineers and government authorities to doubt the availability of the airship in times of peace.

It is always a very hazardous proceeding to prophesy regarding the future of an invention, in the early stages of its development. Two decades ago, the gravest doubts were entertained regarding the future of the airplane, which seems absurd enough in the light of the unparalleled subsequent developments. Some time ago, the late Lord Thomas wrote:

It is not 20 years since the First Lord of the British Admiralty rejected proposals made by Wilbur and Orville Wright in the following terms: "I have consulted my expert advisers with regard to your suggestion as to the employment of aeroplanes, and I regret to have to tell you . . . that the Admiralty . . . are of opinion that they would not be of any practical service to the Naval Service." This reply represented the attitude of the British naval and, though to a less degree, the military authorities towards aviation seven years before the World War.

The dirigible has been definitely discarded for military purposes, it would appear, because of its unwieldiness and great bulk, which make it too vulnerable to attack by the airplane. The Germans used it with some effect for raiding purposes during the World War. But for the last 18 months of the war the airship was given up for raiding purposes in favor of the airplane.

There can be little doubt that the dirigible still has a future for naval purposes. It would serve as the "eyes and ears" of the navy of any nation, in making long scouting expeditions over great bodies of water like the Atlantic and Pacific. Even then it operates under very severe handicaps. Huge mooring masts and sheds must be provided in advance; they cannot be improvised on short notice. A mast costs $350,000, and a hangar $1,250,000. And this over and above the cost of the airship itself, which is an immense sum, running up high into the millions.

The risks in airship construction are very grave. Airships have to be thoroughly tried out and tested; and the dangers here are always great. Then there is the risk of a vast outlay of capital; the cost of the ship, sheds, machinery, gas plants and labor. A team of 200 men is required to get an airship of the bulk of the R-101 in and out of her shed. No private firm or corporation will undertake all these vast risks, financial, commercial and technical. It is now entirely left to the governments of the world to determine the future of the dirigible. There seems no reason to doubt that the airship has a future for scouting and exploratory purposes. Its costs and dangers must both be greatly lessened, to assure the airship's future in world traffic and transportation.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

The following facts are starting rows. They're starting rows wherever men are employing, or being employed. And this isn't any passing squabble. It means more than a temporary shrinkage of pay envelopes. It means that something is happening to American history. For the good? Or the bad? I don't know. Here are the facts. Judge for yourself.

A certain man inserted the following notice in the want ads of a morning paper:

"Carpenters—5—rough work—must be fast workers—$4 a day. Apply at .... Jones St."

By the next morning, 74 letters commenting on that ad had arrived at this department. The writers were all indignant and voiced much the same argument. Something should be done about an offer like that! That man was taking advantage of the workers' misfortune to grind them down to slave wages. Who ever heard of skilled carpenters working for $4 a day? The union wage (in the state in which this ad appeared) was $9 a day. It took a man years of hard work, as an apprentice, to put that price on his work. And then some bloated capitalist tried to make all those years count for nothing, just because this winter had put men in a tight hole and their families were starving. A man like that was no better than a stick-up gangster.

Angry letters. And, after watching the bread lines this winter, one couldn't help feeling that there was a reason for their anger. Seeing their life's work, their expert records, cheapened like that . . . And this wasn't an isolated case. It was happening everywhere, to women workers as well as men. What was the other side of the story? I went out to see—

It wasn't hard to find the man who had put in the ad. He was hard at it, with three other men, building an automobile camp beside a new highway extension. He didn't look in the least like a "bloated capitalist." He was a shabby, bent, middle-aged American—evidently tired and nagged by the difficulties of licking a raw crew into shape. When I told him about the letters, he snorted—looked mad—then said this—

"Yes, I suppose it does make them sore to think of taking less than regular wages, but why blame me? I'm not responsible just because things have taken a shift. It's as hard on me as it is on them. They spent a lot of time working themselves up to $9—well, I spent a lot of time, too, working up this little contracting business I got.

"And now here we are, with the prices of everything changing. Some folks call it depression. Think we'll get over it. Personally, I think it means a lasting change, all along the line. But whether it's here for keeps or not—this much is sure.....we're all in the same boat.

"I can't ask as much for my jobs as I used to. Then why should they expect as much for their labor? If I give them the regular old wages, I'll have to quit—that's all. And a lot of businesses have had to quit, just on that account. But if I can get men to work for $4, why, I can keep going—and so can they. Isn't that better than trying to hold up the old wage schedule and having to quit? I'm not trying to gouge 'em. I'm just trying to keep things going until we all know where we are."

A sensible and fair enough answer. And yet—

What's YOUR opinion?

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Wealth

Man's wealth, so all the wise have learned,
Is not the gold his toil has earned,
Not holdings patiently amassed
At cost of labors long and vast.
For lands and gems and great estates
Can sometimes drag like heavy weights,
While all true wealth must be so light
It does not bind the spirit's flight.
Wealth means all things a man may love,
Which through his loving daily prove
A source of constant happiness,
A dower that must always bless.
Wealth means the simplest joys man knows:
Bird-song, sea-wind, an opening rose;
Dawn, and a child's shrill song's refrain . . .
These make the wealth that does not wane.

Pictures Create Reality

Here You See and Hear a Deed That Filled the Nation With Grief.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN SHOT BY WILKES BOOTH

Every school child knows that Booth shot Lincoln as the great President sat in his box at Ford's Theater on April 14, 66 years ago.

Every child and adult, looking at this picture from Griffith's "Abraham Lincoln," sees the dreadful calamity as a picture more vivid than it could possibly be made in words.

This picture explains the hold of moving pictures on millions of human beings and makes clear the importance of utilizing pictures in education.

A day is coming when films for schools and churches will be more important even than films for theaters.

A child who sees the life of Lincoln in moving and speaking pictures will never forget it, and will learn more in two hours than he could possibly learn in two months or 10 years from books.

Men have been reading only for a short time. They have been SEEING for millions of years . . . they and their lower animal ancestors.

What we see reaches the brain immediately.

This picture shows Lincoln and his wife, unsuspecting, looking at the stage. In the background stands John Wilkes Booth, murderous fanatic, determined to rid the world of one whom he called a monster.

You see the President falling to the floor, beside his terror-stricken wife. You see Booth jumping from the box to the stage shouting "Sic semper tyrannis" ("Thus ever, the tyrant"), injuring his leg and limping off to mount the horse left at the stage door.

The great power of moving pictures is to make real that which is indistinct, dull and uninteresting, when presented in written words only.

A child sees Lincoln studying as a boy in the little hut with a dirt floor and no windows, sees the other Lincoln cutting down trees, splitting logs, sees President Lincoln bearing the burden of the nation. He sees the sorrowful death and knows that life story for all time.

Moving talking pictures, dealing with the 100 most important men and women in the world's history, would do more to each history, writing it indelibly on the brains of children, than could be done by all the books ever written.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, April 1.—Manhattan is the restless citadel of the chronic insomniac. It is said only 10 out of every 100 in congested areas enjoy refreshing sleep nightly. According to population, more sleeping potions are sold here than in any other city in the world.

Many of the modern department-store-like drug stores sell scarcely anything in medicinal departments save nostrums for sleeplessness. Wall street leads in sufferers from wakefulness, and next come people attuned to the cyclonic excitement of the stage.

Night noises, of course, have much to do with insomnia, but a greater reason is the taut nerves of the telling pace. Thousands whimper to their doctors that the minute their heads touch pillows and lights go out their "brains begin to race."

New Yorkers cannot acquire the languor of relaxation. They carry their problems to sleeping chambers. They toss and turn in a feverish fitfulness until they greet the dawn in blear-eyed exhaustion. And eventually they are carted off to those screened in cloisters called "rest cures."

In the past 15 years more than 500 retreats dealing with nervous exhaustion have sprung up in the remote suburbs of New York. They charge anywhere from $75 a week to one de luxe establishment whose rates are from $350 to $750 per week.

New Yorkers who prowl in the early morning come across the unhappy insomniacs. After fighting for sleep for hours, they arise, dress and roam the streets in hope of becoming so physically exhausted they can snatch 40 winks before rushing to the office.

I know innumerable men who work at high pressure and are rarely able to salvage more than five hours repost without resorting to bromides. There are others who sleep an hour and are awake an hour—and so alternating throughout a torturous night.

Irving Berlin is reputed to average but four hours' sleep nightly. Flo Ziegfeld is awake every morning at 4:30. Paul Whiteman can never fall asleep before 4 a. m. Chaplin is so light a sleeper he locks himself in nightly in fear of sleep walking. Helen Morgan, Helen Menken and Clara Bow—for smart alecs the information is hearsay—sleep by fits and starts.

During several nights of giddy wakefulness superinduced by the high altitude of Mexico City some years ago, I sat up spinning yarns with Jim Coffroth, who never seems to sleep. Just when I was beginning to believe I would not be able to sleep again I accepted an invitation to a very formal dinner, went to sleep at the table, and with mouth agape snored through the entire meal. Life has been a succession of such social blunders. All that is needed to have a party queered is have me walk through the room. And I'm the go upsetting backgammon gatherings.

She is a clear cut cameo out of the long ago as out of place in the modern parade as a buffalo wallow on Park avenue. Her dress is a deep wine-colored alpaca with panniers at the side and she wears a perky old-fashioned bonnet that bobbs with each step. Every afternoon she goes to an East Forty-fifth street speakeasy, has an old-fashioned cocktail and smokes a cigaret.

And on West Forty-fourth street this afternoon a taxi drew up at the curb of a hotel. A striking looking lady with a smile as bright as a prairie sky stepped out, took a swig from a small flask, handed it to the driver, who swigged too. Then she paid and tipped him and he shot away. New York!

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

If none feels the right to prod you to greater effort, prod yourself.

Prodding is good to keep you out of a rut.

To get in a rut destroys your general usefulness and is likely to land you in the workers' scrap heap.

At times such as the present the producer is given the preference.

Workers are laid off in the order of those least necessary to carry on.

In the past your work may have been of a high and satisfactory order.

But then you were more active and applied yourself more studiously as well as industriously to your job.

You may be producing now as much as ever, but that is not enough in the face of present conditions.

There is a demand for greater volume from each person employed often as a result of reductions in labor force to meet decreased business income.

This is a poor time to remain in the groove of ordinary production.

If you are not being advised to bestir yourself, you better subject yourself to the prod without waiting for it to be given you.

Don't be satisfied to jog along in the usual way or you may find yourself looking for another position.
